25,000 WATCH NATS CONQUER MACKMEN, 7-3

Pop Bottle Is Hurled at Simmons After Interference on Bases.

FANS JEER AND HOOT IN CLOSING INNINGS

Triple to Scoreboard by West in Sixth Wins for Washington.

LEAD OF ATHLETICS CUT TO 7½ GAMES

Crowder Goes Route, While Mates Pound Walberg for 14 Safeties.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

Twenty-five thousand fans turned out to see the Nationals and Mackmen in their Sabbath battle yesterday, and they were rewarded with a rip-snorting game in which the Johnsons downed the world champions, 7 to 3, and cut the Athletics' lead to seven and one-half games. The victory, which, incidentally, gave the Nats a 50-50 break with the Athletics on the season's play, each having won nine, allowed them to stretch their second-place margin by three and one-half games, for the New Yorkers could do no better than split even in a double-header with the Cleveland Indians.

An indication of how seriously Washington fans are taking their baseball this season was shown in the Mackmen's eighth when, with one run over the plate and Simmons on first, Foxx sent a hot grasser to Myer, who shot the ball to Cronin, covering second, in the hope of making a double play. Although Simmons was out by feet, he crowded into Cronin and grabbed his arm, preventing him from even making a throw to first to complete the double play.

Simmons Fools Ump.

Umpire Bill McGowan then showed why the arbiters sometimes are referred to as blind men, for he didn't see Simmons' unfair action. The fans did, however, one even going to far as to toss a pop bottle at Jimmy Dykes, while he was waiting for his turn to hit, while the game had to be delayed for a few moments in the Nats' half while another bottle, hurled at Simmons from the left-field stands, was "escorted" off the field.

It would seem that with three umpires on the job, between them they would see everything that happens on the bases during a game, but neither Roy Van Graflan nor Tommy Connolly would take it upon himself to overrule McGowan. It's things like this cause riots at games. During the remainder of the game the fans hooted and jeered at every opportunity.

As to the other parts of the game, there also was plenty of action, with "General" Alvin Crowder having the better of George (Rube) Walberg on the pitching mound. The Nationals went into the lead in the second when they scored slightly tainted runs, with the Mackmen knotting for this string in the fourth and becoming 1-up in the sixth. In the lower portion of this latter frame, the Nats came back with a 4-run rally and the game really ended then and there, although the Mackmen scored once in their eighth and the Johnsons retaliated with a splurge of two in their half.

Joe Cronin Leads.

Although Joe Cronin was credited with three of Washington's fourteen safeties, with Manush, Judge, Bluege, Spencer and West getting two each, the "blow that killed father" was a three-base clout against the scoreboard by West in the sixth session. It scored two runs and later was turned into another.

Walberg led his team with the willow, getting a double and two singles, but these did not figure in the scoring, while the hits which he granted certainly did. Crowder allowed ten bingles and, although two came in two of the Mackmen's scoring frames and three in the other, he was able to prevent them from counting in

Acetylene Blast Injures Worker

Side of Southern Oxygen Building Blown Out by Explosion.

Struck down by a sudden explosion which blew out the entire side of the acetylene building of the Southern Oxygen Co., close to the southern end of Highway Bridge, in South Washington, J. B. Herndon, 40 years old, of 338 C street southeast, an employe, received undetermined injuries shortly before midnight.

Herndon was rushed by a fellow employe to Emergency Hospital, where his exact condition could not be learned, although he was said to have suffered severe cuts and lacerations, and possibly other hurts.

The blast occurred just a few moments after Herndon walked into the one-story brick structure from a group of fellow employes with whom he had been working in the company's property.

Calvin Coolidge

Says: The economic strength of the world has been greatly increased in the past five years by the revival of the financial power of the French government. So late as 1925, while its people enjoyed considerable prosperity, the government finances were in an uncertain condition. The franc was fluctuating, mostly downward, unsettling foreign exchange. The budget was not balanced. Large sums had to be borrowed; government securities were low and interest high. Great expenditures and debts had been incurred in anticipation of reparations which had not arrived. Yet Americans like Ambassador Herrick who know France did not lose confidence. They remembered the Marne.

A great people under the great leadership of Poincare was able to fund its debts, stabilize its franc, balance its budget, recall its foreign balances, fill the Bank of France with gold and send its bonds well above par. In a short time France has become one of the great assets of the financial world. No one can estimate the future resources of a country that is willing to work, save and face facts.

The rest of the world, including ourselves, may well take renewed courage from this example. It justifies our faith in mankind.

POLICE ORDER FAILS TO END BOND INQUIRY

Reported Collusion in Liquor Cases May Be Laid Before Grand Jury.

ROVER TO SIFT CHARGES

Despite the fact that Maj. Henry G. Pratt, superintendent of police, issued orders that all policemen making arrests under the prohibition law charge the defendant with only one offense instead of a multiplicity of charges, as in the past, Milton S. Kronheim, president of the Professional Bondsmen's Association, declared yesterday that he has an engagement to call on United States Attorney Leo A. Rover this afternoon, at which time, he says, he will demand a grand jury investigation of reputed collusion between policemen and bondsmen.

Maj. Pratt's order, which was sent out to all precinct commanders Saturday night and which also bore the signature of Inspector L. J. Stoll, follows:

"In the future, or until further orders, officers raiding a place on a warrant charging parties with selling liquor will only charge the defendant with sale of liquor at the precinct at the time of the arrest. When they get to Mr. Hart's office, if he sees fit to charge them, after hearing evidence, with anything else, then the officer will return to the station and enter the additional charge. This applies to all prohibition cases."

The order of the police chief marks a victory for Assistant United States Attorney David A. Hart, in charge of liquor enforcement in Police Court, who early last week declared that a man arrested on a liquor charge should only be held under a nominal bond until arraignment.

Mr. Hart declared he had made such a suggestion when questioned as to whether he believed police and bondsmen were working together, particularly in liquor cases. The questioning of the prosecutor followed his action in throwing out 13 of the 25 liquor cases made by the police during the last week-end.

Maj. Pratt's order to the precincts in regard to liquor charges is the second step taken by him during the week to aid enforcement of the prohibition law. The police chief ordered an investigation of liquor enforcement immediately after Mr. Hart discarded the thirteen cases last week, and as a result reprimanded two policemen and warned twelve others who were implicated in unwarranted arrests. Mr. Hart, in throwing out the thirteen cases, said that the po-

POLICEMAN IS SHOT IN RUNNING GUN DUEL

One Held and Two Flee After Maryland and Capital Pursuers Halt Car.

BEGUN IN BLADENSBURG

With bullets raining freely, a thrilling chase through Bladensburg and upper Rhode Island avenue northeast last night ended with the capture of an automobile and arrest of one of its three occupants by Twelfth Precinct police and nearby Maryland authorities.

Chief H. L. Leonard, of the Prince Georges County rescue squad, who figured in the chase, was struck on the right wrist by a bullet fired from the fleeing machine, but continued in pursuit.

Terminating their pursuit of the machine a few minutes after it had been abandoned in Mount Rainier, Chief Leonard and Twelfth Precinct Policeman I. H. Wilson, driver of an emergency machine, took in custody Herbert Monroe Brooks, 25 years old, of Mount Rainier, on a technical charge of investigation. The abandoned car, bearing Ohio license plates, was said to be a Mount Rainier machine. Police there said they knew the names of the other two men who had been in the machine, but made their escape.

The machine, a large touring car, made its appearance when it swept past a red traffic light at the Peace Monument in Bladensburg in proceeding from the Defense highway into the highway leading to Washington. Constable William Norgle leaped to the running board and attempted to stop the machine, finally striking one of the three men with his blackjack.

One of the men struck him in the stomach, and he fell to the road. Chief Leonard, proceeding nearby in his own automobile, observed the incident and immediately started in pursuit. The two machines swung into the Cottage City road and then to Eastern avenue, veering off into Rhode Island avenue. As Chief Leonard poked out his hand to attract the attention of Policeman Wilson the shot from the advance car struck him.

Mrs. Yost Will Meet G.O.P. Committee Today

(Associated Press.)

Mrs. Ellis A. Yost left last night for her home in Clarksburg, W. Va., where she will make her debut as director of Republican women activities today at a meeting of the West Virginia Republican committee.

She took charge of the Washington office of the women's wing of the Republican party only four days ago.

Boy Who Puzzled Doctors With Right-Side Heart Dies

Misplaced Organ, Weak All During Youth's 17 Years, Finally Fails Altogether; Police Called to Quiet Uproar at Hospital.

Mike Callos, the boy who lived for seventeen years on "borrowed time," died last night en route to the Emergency Hospital, the heart that by a freak of nature had been placed on the right side of his body finally breaking down.

Mike, a pale, anemic youngster with a vigorous determination to live, was born with his heart so placed that physicians marveled. All his life he had been the object of intense professional scrutiny by physicians who were puzzled by his case.

The heart never did function normally, and the boy was always forced to restrain himself for fear of setting up an exertion that would cause it to stop. He went through the graded schools here and then attended the Jefferson Junior High School. A few months ago he was forced from school when his heart began to fail, and last night the steadily decreasing beat quit all together.

Mike lived in Jackson Hall alley. His people there picked him up when he toppled over about 9:30 last night and headed for Emergency Hospital in a desperate attempt to reach medical aid. The boy was pronounced dead by a staff physician, and Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt was notified. Staff physicians listed the cause of death as heart failure, but an autopsy may be performed officially to establish the cause.

The emergency room at the hospital was thrown into a temporary uproar when the boy was officially pronounced dead. There were seven people in the crowd that accompanied the boy to the hospital and they became excited. Some were hysterical.

Hospital authorities were busy for ten minutes trying to quiet them and finally were forced to call for police aid. Two patrolmen arrived at the hospital just as the party was leaving.

MISS NUTHALL CAPTURES U.S. TENNIS CROWN

Defeats Mrs. Harper in Two Sets in National Women's Finals.

ENGLISH GIRL VICTOR BY SCORE OF 6—1, 6—4

Is First Foreigner in 43 Years to Take Title From America.

CALIFORNIA WOMAN STAGES BRIEF RALLY

Makes Threat in Second Set, but Succumbs to Hard Smashes of Invader.

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, Long Island, N. Y., Aug. 24.—In the absence of Mrs. Helen Wills Moody and Miss Helen Jacobs, the women's tennis championship went to Miss Betty Nuthall, the English girl, at the end of a rather perfunctory final match this afternoon.

The tragedy of the loss of the challenge cup to an alien athlete for the first time in the 43 years of its existence, was borne with surprising gayety by the 4,000 patrons who struggled through the perils and vexations of the Sunday afternoon traffic on the Long Island roads and then sat on the open banks of the concrete arena, exposed to occasional sprays of rain from a gloomy sky. Miss Nuthall won from Mrs. Laurence Harper, of San Francisco, formerly Miss Anna McCune, 6—1, 6—4.

Typical English Girl.

The new champion, who might be termed an interim champion, is a pink, robust blonde of the sort usually pictured, on English Christmas cards and insurance calendars as the typical English girl. Mrs. Harper is a small, slight, dark haired athlete and a left-hander. She set up some resistance in the second set, but hers was a feminine game and the tennis championships are won by an adjustment of skill, endurance and amazonian muscle.

The crowd cheered both girls without discrimination, and when the match finally ended and the championship left the country for the first time on a placement shot past Mrs. Harper's back hand, the blow to the national prestige was accepted with a crackle of hand clapping and a brief shrill of pleasure.

The fact that Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory won the championship seven times does not seem to count against the consistency of the American defense, although Mrs. Mallory was born in Norway and came to this country as a young woman and a star player. The justification of this idea leads off into international law and the naturalization regulations. But, any-

GERMAN PLANE IN NOVA SCOTIA ON WAY TO U.S.

Atlantic Fliers Keep Hop From Labrador Secret Like Others.

FOG ONLY DIFFICULTY ON WAY TO HALIFAX

Airmen Hope to Depart Today on Flight to New York.

MOST LIKELY ROUTE OVER NEW ENGLAND

Average Speed 85 Miles an Hour; Last Lap Hampered by Dirty Weather.

Halifax, Nova Scotia, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—Four German aviators on their way to the United States arrived in Nova Scotia this afternoon after an unheralded and surprising flight by flying boat across the Atlantic from Germany.

Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau and his three companions landed at Queensport Harbor, Guysboro County, about 130 miles from Halifax, at 3:45 p. m., Atlantic daylight time (1:45 p. m. E. S. T.).

The airmen plan to continue their flight to the United States. If the weather clears, they will leave Queensport for Halifax tomorrow morning. Their most probable route after that will take them down the Atlantic Coast over New England.

Capt. von Gronau said that apart from fog he had met with no difficulty on the flight. His charts were not detailed enough to enable him to reach Halifax. They left Cartwright Harbor, Labrador, at 7 a. m. (5 a. m., E. S. T.), which, in turn, they had reached yesterday from Ivigtuit, Greenland.

As there is neither wireless nor telegraph station at Cartwright, their departure for Nova Scotia was as unheralded as their departure yesterday from Greenland. The whole flight has been a series of surprises.

Originally von Gronau, who is accompanied by Edward Zimmer, one of the captain's aviation students, Franz Hack, mechanic, and a wireless operator named Albrecht, left the German school for commercial pilots at Warnemuende on a training flight early last week. Von Gronau is head of the school.

Sent Report on Way Across.

They flew to the Faroe Islands, and from there to Reykjavik, Iceland, arriving on Wednesday. They were then expected to fly back to Germany, but on Friday they reported by wireless, stating that they were in a position on the route to Greenland. Subsequently it was learned from Copenhagen that Von Gronau some months ago had asked for a supply of gasoline to be sent to Julianehaab, Greenland, there to await his arrival.

Hoover Report Bares Extent of Air Travel

Planes of 45 Companies Fly 120,000 Miles Each Day.

(Associated Press.)

Air transportation as an indispensable factor in the country's general transportation scheme was seen yesterday in a report to President Hoover on the progress of commercial aviation in the United States for the past eighteen months.

The report, made by Clarence M. Young, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics, at the request of Mr. Hoover, showed that fewer planes were being manufactured now as compared to 1929, but it also disclosed a substantial increase in the number of concerns operating scheduled air lines.

Thirty-five companies operated 59 scheduled air lines eighteen months ago. They flew 69,000 miles every 24 hours in the United States and in Canada, Mexico and Central America.

There are 45 such companies at present and they operate 137 mail, passenger and express routes, both domestic and foreign. They fly approximately 120,000 miles in the United States, Canada, Mexico, the West Indies, Central and South America each day.

Last year, Young said, approximately 6,000 planes were produced, of which about 650 were military craft. Reports for the first six months of 1930 showed 1,325 aircraft were made for civil use and 359 for military purposes.

Mr. Young said the reduced production did not indicate the capacity of the industry. He added that more than 7,000 planes could be produced yearly by bringing back the qualified personnel released because of business decrease.

The report said that of the 6,786 licensed airplanes in the country, about 650 were employed in scheduled air transportation. Eighty per cent of the remainder are used for miscellaneous commercial activities and approximately 20 per cent for pleasure flying.

The Assistant Secretary said when the provisions of the Watres air mail act were in full force it would benefit both the aviation industry and the public.

Young reported the assistance of the Government through the Commerce Department had been substantially responsible for air development.

U. S. TAX RECEIPTS SHOW BIG INCREASE DURING FISCAL YEAR

Boy Pilot, 18, Lowers Three Flight Marks

Eddie Schneider Lowers Goldsborough Records Through Hop.

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., Aug. 24 (A. P.).—Eighteen-year-old Eddie Schneider, of Jersey City, N. J., landed here from Columbus, Ohio, at 3:06 p. m. (E. S. T.) today with three junior transcontinental records in his possession.

Beating the three records set by the late Frank Goldsborough, who was killed recently in a crash, he chalked up the following marks: East-West, 29 hours and 41 minutes; West-East, 27 hours and 19 minutes; round trip, 57 hours.

The Goldsborough records were: East-West, 34 hours 3 minutes; West-East, 28 hours 55 minutes, and round trip, 62 hours 58 minutes.

Battling a storm part of the way, the smiling junior flier came from Columbus to Roosevelt Field in one hop today, slicing one hour and 36 minutes from Goldsborough's mark for the coast-to-coast crossing. Starting from Los Angeles Thursday, he made three overnight stops, at Albuquerque, Wichita and Columbus. He had crossed the continent westward several days ago.

Greeted by his admiring father, Emil A. Schneider, and a large crowd of other relatives and friends, he modestly told of his flight. Two "tough spots," he said, were over the Pennsylvania mountains, when he had to contend with a storm, and a stretch between Albuquerque and Wichita, when all the liquid ran out of his compass and he had to fly by dead reckoning.

He took his plane, the Kangaroo, to a hangar and ministered personally to its wants, announcing that he would fly it to the Chicago air show tomorrow. First, however, he must deliver letters from the Mayor of Los Angeles to Mayors James J. Walker of New York and Frank Hague of Jersey City. He also carried a letter from the Los Angeles Elks to the Jersey City Elks.

POSSE SLAYS KILLER OF BORDER OFFICERS

Two U. S. Immigration Men Shot Dead on Train in Canada.

PITCHED BATTLE ENSUES

Port Frances, Ont., Aug. 24 (A.P.).—Two United States immigration inspectors were shot and killed early today on a train at Emo, Ont., 25 miles west of here, and their assailant was shot and fatally wounded twelve hours later by a posse.

The inspectors killed were Lawrence Doton, about 30 years old, of Ranier, Minn., and Lawrence Jones, 27, of Warrod, Minn. Their assailant was Emeric Frenett, 21, of Fort Frances, who died late today from bullet wounds inflicted by the posse men.

Doton and Jones were assigned to Duluth, Winnipeg and Pacific trains, their duty being to check passengers coming into the United States from Canada. Doton worked between Emo and International Falls, Minn., and Jones between Ranier and Emo.

East and west bound trains meet shortly after midnight at Emo and the inspectors usually change trains there to ride back into their respective territories.

Doton was shot from behind as he arose from his seat when the train was pulling into Emo. A bullet passed through his heart. Frenett apparently had boarded the train at Fort Frances, after eluding police

STERLING TRIUMPHS OVER MRS. FERGUSON

Texan's Lead for Nomination for Governor Mounting Toward 100,000.

VOTE MAY SET RECORD

Dallas, Aug. 24 (A.P.).—His lead mounting slowly toward the 100,000 mark, Ross S. Sterling, of Houston, wealthy chairman of the State Highway Commission, today received scores of congratulations on his selection yesterday as the Democratic nominee for governor.

Unofficial returns to the Texas election bureau from 248 of the State's 253 counties, including 108 complete, gave the following vote in yesterday's run-off race:

Sterling, 462,324; Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, former governor, 370,468.

An unprecedented number of Texas voters was believed to have expressed a preference for Sterling over Mrs. Ferguson, wife of James E. Ferguson, who was impeached while in the governor's chair. More than 800,000 votes had been unofficially tabulated by the Texas election bureau today and most observers expected the total to exceed the 833,442 votes cast in the first primary this year, which set a new high mark.

Sterling, known in the vicinity of Houston through his philanthropies, his civic work, his building enterprises and his ownership of the Houston Post-Dispatch, grasped his first

Mrs. Hoover's Scenic Road Plans to Be Used by State

Virginia Conservation Commission Stakes Out 20-Mile Stretch as First Link in Highway to Traverse Shenandoah National Park.

Orange, Va., Aug. 24 (A.P.).—At the instance of Mrs. Herbert Hoover, the Virginia Conservation Commission has staked out a 20-mile stretch of scenic Blue Ridge Mountain country near the Hoover camp as the first link in the main highway to traverse the Shenandoah National Park.

Work on the road, to be known as the Hoover highway, probably will start in the fall and commission officials expect it to be ready for tourist travel by next summer. Eventually the main highway will be continued up and down the great mountain ridges and probably will reach from Front Royal on the north to Staunton on the south.

The first link to be staked out skirts the President's Rapidan River lodge, crosses the Marine Guard camp a mile away and continues to Hawksbill Peak, the highest in the Blue Ridge Range in Virginia.

From its 4,000-foot summit the highway will continue to Crescent Rock, one of the most beautiful spots on the trail, and will follow the backbone of the mountain ranges over to Skyland and Stony Man Mountain. From there it will trail down the mountain and exit at Luray.

Although he spent Saturday night conferring with Secretary Hurley and Army engineers on inland waterway affairs, the President made no announcement of the progress. Today he arose early and with Mrs. Hoover and their guests drove to the Marine camp a mile down Fork Mountain and attended church services at a little pine community hall. The services were initiated by Mr. Hoover, and today's were the first held.

Lieut. Comdr. C. A. Neyman, Navy chaplain of Washington, D. C., delivered a short sermon and a United States Marine played a small organ brought down by truck from the National Capital last week.

After dinner the President and his party devoted the remainder of the day to short hikes and horseback riding over the mountain trails. The party will leave early tomorrow for Washington.

Total of $3,040,145,733 Reported by Internal Revenue Chief.

INCOMES ARE FIRST IN AUGMENTING SUM

Greater Amount Is Paid, Despite 1 Per Cent Reduction in 1929.

BACK COLLECTIONS OUTWEIGH REFUNDS

Tobacco and Documentary Levies Bring More; New York Richest State.

A preliminary report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for the fiscal year 1930 shows total collections of $3,040,145,733.17, compared with $2,939,054,375.43 for the previous year, an increase of $101,091,357.74.

The larger amount of the increase came from incomes, the figures being $2,410,259,230.28 for 1930 and $2,331,274,428.64 for 1929, a difference of $78,984,801.64.

The increase in miscellaneous collections for the two years was $22,106,556.10, the principal increases coming from tobacco manufactures and documentary stamp taxes.

"The income tax provisions of the revenue act of 1928 in effect during the fiscal year 1930" said Commissioner Lucas, "were practically the same as for the previous fiscal year, except that by a joint resolution of Congress approved by the President on December 16, 1929, the rate of the income tax on corporations and the rates of the normal tax on individuals were reduced 1 per cent for the calendar year 1929.

Corporation Income Comparisons.

"The corporation income tax collected during the fiscal year 1930 was at the rate of 11 per cent on incomes earned in the calendar year 1929, and 12 per cent on incomes earned in the calendar year 1928, while the tax collected on corporations during the fiscal year 1929 was at the rate of 12 per cent on incomes earned in the calendar year 1928 and 13½ per cent on incomes earned in the calendar year 1927.

"In accordance with the provisions of the joint resolution of Congress herein before referred to, the normal income tax collected on individual returns during the last six months of the fiscal year 1930 was at the rate of one-half of 1 per cent upon the first $4,000 of net taxable income, 2 per cent upon the next $4,000 and 4 per cent on the amount in excess of $8,000. During the first six months of the fiscal year 1930 the rates on normal income tax collected were 1½ per cent upon the first $4,000 of taxable income, 3 per cent upon the next $4,000, and 5 per cent on the amount in excess of $8,000. The surtax rates ranged from 1 per cent on net income in excess of $10,000, a maximum of 20 per cent on net incomes in excess of $100,000. There was allowed against the tax for these years a credit of 25 per cent of the tax upon earned net incomes of $30,000 or less. The personal exemption was $1,500 for a single person and $3,500 for a married person living with husband or wife. A credit of $400 was allowed for each dependent.

Miscellaneous Tax Unchanged.

"The miscellaneous taxes under provisions of the revenue act of 1928 were the same in the fiscal year 1930 as in the fiscal year 1929."

During the fiscal year, 1930, tax refunds were made from the following appropriations:

Refunding taxes illegally collected in 1928 and prior years, $3,986.95.

Refunding taxes illegally collected in 1929 and prior years, $22,170,741.33.

Refunding taxes illegally collected in 1930 and prior years, $104,661,604.94.

Net total, $126,836,333.22.

The following is a summary of these refunds, showing the number of schedules and claims, amount refunded and interest allowed on each class of tax:

From office audits and field investigations for the fiscal year 1930 as follows:

Class of tax.	Amount.
Income	$264,302,130.16
Estimate	27,656,938.96
Gift	92,584.94
Capital Stock	2,522.50
Sales	809,484.64
Miscellaneous	10,095,377.74
Tobacco	96,068.04
Total	$303,055,026.98

Back Taxes Outweighs Refunds.

"If the tax refunds on account of erroneous or illegal collections for the fiscal year 1930 and prior years, amounting to $126,836,333.22," said the commissioner's report, "were reduced from the gross collections of $3,040,145,733.17, the net collections for the fiscal year would be $2,913,309,399.95. The gross collections, however, are used for comparative purposes in the report.

"It is interesting to note that the total amount of refunds of taxes erroneously or illegally collected, which were made during the past fourteen years, namely $1,254,317,890.62, is approximately 23 per cent of the total amount of additional assessments resulting from office audits and field investigations ($5,345,202,277) which have been made during the same period. The percentage of the total refunds ($1,254,317,890.62) to the total internal revenue receipts during the period in question ($44,032,371,357.94) is approximately 2.8 per cent."

Installments From Other Years.

The receipts from income for 1930 include payment of the third and fourth installments of the tax on the returns of net income for 1928 and the first and second installments of the tax on the returns of net incomes for 1929, together with additional collections made for prior years.

A comparison of the quarterly receipts from the tax on incomes during the last two fiscal years is as follows:

	1929.	1928.
Quarter ended Sept. 30	$609,466,017.85	$511,007,072
Quarter ended Dec. 31	575,136,909.94	502,062524

Total	$2,410,259,230.28	$2,331,274,428

A comparison of the quarterly receipts from miscellaneous taxes during the last two fiscal years is as follows:

Total	$629,886,502.89	$607,779,946.79

New York led all other States in 1930 in paying revenue, with a total of $928,955,021.27 from incomes of $830,165,401.16 and miscellaneous levies of $98,789,620.01.

CARNIVAL PLEASES FIREMEN OF COUNTY

Event Just Closing in Arlington Believed Host Successful Ever Held There.

CHORISTERS WILL SING

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

The officers of the Arlington-Fairfax Fireman's Relief Association are jubilant over the outcome of the two weeks' carnival which has been conducted by the association at Fort Myer Heights, on the Wilson Boulevard. Chairman J. R. Mossburg, who had charge of all arrangements, stated last night that he believed this carnival was one of the most successful ever conducted by the association. While the proceeds might not equal the former records, he believes that they will be almost as large.

The automobile that was awarded to the holder of the lucky number was won by E. B. Donaldson, of 2225 Lawrence street, northeast, Washington, and the suite of furniture was won by Donald Sheehan, of 706 Walbrooke street, Virginia Highlands. Chairman Mossburg also stated last night that the exact amount that was cleared by the association would not be known until next week, as there are many outstanding bills, and that the committee on arrangements would not be able to meet until after Labor Day.

The Clarendon Rebekah Lodge, No. 28, will hold its meeting this evening in the Odd Fellows Hall.

The Capitol City Choristers will present a program tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Virginia Avenue Christian Church at Lyon Park. The music will be furnished by a mixed chorus of twenty-five trained voices. Members of the chorus will render solos. One of the most interesting features of the evening will be a musical guessing contest, for which prizes will be offered to the winners.

A woods fire, believed by many firemen to have been of incendiary origin, kept the departments of the county busy yesterday. The dense smoke was visible for many miles and a large number of persons on their way to the morning church services went out of their way to investigate the source.

The lack of water in that neighborhood, which was west of the Glebe road, between Mount Olivet road and the Lee highway, kept the firemen from doing much active fire fighting. They confined their efforts to keeping the flames from spreading.

Another fire early yesterday morning caused about $2,500 damage to the home of R. V. Johanson, at the Columbia Pike Station in Arlington. The blaze spread rapidly but was soon checked by the fire department.

The Arlington Lodge, No. 193, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, will hold its regular monthly meeting tomorrow night in the Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon.

PARK BILL TO RAISE TAX RATE, IS CHARGE

Prettyman Assails Plans in Political Address at Poolesville.

SAYS BURDEN ON COUNTY

Assertions that the Cramton bill for park development in Montgomery County can be operated without any increase in taxes were attacked last night by E. Barrett Prettyman, of Chevy Chase, Md., Progressive Democratic candidate for election to the Maryland House of Delegates, addressing a political meeting at Poolesville, Md.

Leaders of the Democratic organization now in power in the county propose, Mr. Prettyman pointed out, to finance park development under the Cramton bill through a 50-year bond issue to be met out of the 7-cent park tax now in effect, the issue "probably to be approved by the 1931 State Legislature."

The park program outlined in the Cramton bill would require expenditure of about $3,000,000 to be loaned to the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission by the Federal Government and to be repaid within eight years. This would provide for the development of about 4,000 acres of parkways in Montgomery County and 2,000 acres in Prince Georges County.

Says Leaders Own Land.

"The Progressive Democrats favor extension of park lands in Maryland near Washington," Mr. Prettyman declared, "but we believe it should be known by the public that the real reason the organization Democrats are so insistent that the Cramton bill be made operative immediately and with its present financial provisions, is that certain leaders of the organization own practically all of the land adjoining the proposed park areas."

It is proposed by the organization that "it is hoped that the State would assume $1,000,000 of this $3,000,000 obligation, and Prince Georges County $800,000, leaving $1,200,000 to be paid by Montgomery County, as the amount of the proposed bond issue."

Proposing to pay the principal and interest on this $1,200,000 bond issue out of the present 7-cent tax, the organization leaders insist that this could be accomplished "with no increase in taxes," yet add that "two general reassessments would be made to provide funds" for liquidating the bonds, Mr. Prettyman points out.

Figures Are Given.

"The total amount collected through the 7-cent park tax," he explains, "is but $40,000 annually, yet the interest alone on $1,200,000 bonds—even allowing that the State might agree to assume $1,000,000 of the Federal loan and that Prince Georges County might consent to pay 40 per cent of the remaining debt for development of its 33 1-3 per cent of the total parkway—amounts to $60,000 a year, at 5 per cent.

"Thus the interest alone would require $20,000 more than the total available for interest and principal combined. As a matter of fact, to pay off $1,200,000 in bonds within 50 years would require a total of $84,000 a year, including principal and interest, or $44,000 more than the total of $40,000 available.

"Outrageous" Tax Rise.

"There," Mr. Prettyman explained, "is where the proposed two general reassessments would come in. It might be possible to pay off the bonds without increasing the present 7-cent rate, but to do so it would be necessary to more than double the present assessment values, which obviously accomplishes the same effect upon the taxpayers' bank account as would an increase in rates.

"The Progressive Democratic party favors the extension into Montgomery County of national parkways surrounding Washington, but the cost of such parkways should be borne primarily by the national government. We condemn the financial provisions of the Cramton bill, which places the burden upon the taxpayers of Montgomery County, and must result in an outrageous increase in taxes of every citizen of the county.

"Particularly do we condemn attempts to camouflage the truth by concealing the facts about the tax increases which obviously will be necessary to provide for park development under the Cramton bill."

Dry Issue Raised By Izetta Jewell

Former Actress and Wife of Dean Miller New York Congress Aspirant.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 24.—Mrs. Hugh Miller, of Schenectady, N. Y., wife of Dean Miller, of Union College, and formerly Mrs. Izetta Jewell Brown, wife of the late Representative Brown, of this district of West Virginia, who was nominated by the Democrats of the Thirteenth District of New York as their congressional candidate, will make the race on an out-and-out wet platform, friends of hers in this section have learned.

Mrs. Miller's political career in the State of New York recalls her attempt to secure the Democratic senatorial nomination in West Virginia in 1922, when, despite defeat at the hands of Senator M. M. Ibely, she polled a heavy vote. At that time she espoused the dry cause and was adamant in her position against modifying the prohibition laws.

Before her marriage to Mr. Brown, Mrs Miller was Miss Izetta Jewell, actress. Representative Brown met her while she was playing at Poli's Theater in Washington.

State Dry Agents Trap Man in Liquor Delivery

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Aug. 24.—C. F. Hottle, who tola officers he worked in an industrial plant by day and clerked for a bootlegger at night, was trapped by three State prohibition officers last night in the sale of five gallons of liquor and held in jail for a hearing, police said. They agreed to meet "under the elm tree" on the Northwestern pike, a popular trysting place, after the agents had sampled the liquor from a bottle.

Hottle was arrested while carrying the jugs of liquor to the officers, who were strangers to him. A man accompanying him in an automobile, for whom he is said to have been night clerk, drove off, and is being hunted by police.

VIRGINIA REPUBLICAN SENATE RACE OPEN

No Agreement Is Reached; Opposition Growing to Indorsing Byars.

DEPRESSION IS OBSTACLE

Special to The Washington Post.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 24.—Virginia Republicans have reached no agreement on the nominee to oppose United States Senator Carter Glass in the November election, reports reaching here indicate, although the convention meets in Roanoke next Saturday to select the party standard bearer.

These reports add that opposition is developing to the proposal to indorse J. Lloyd Byars, of Arlington, anti-Glass and anti-Smith Democrat, who has announced himself as an independent candidate for the Senate.

The rank and file of Republicans want a straight-out party fight, it is asserted, these recalling the political catastrophe of last fall when Dr. William Mosely Brown, the coalition candidate for governor, was snowed under by Dr. John Garland Pollard. It is claimed that the coalition ticket last fall cost the Republicans 84,000 of the Hoover votes in 1928, while it resulted in a gain of 30,000 by the Democrats.

State Leaders Not Agreed.

While the local leaders are expecting the State party heads to have some senatorial candidate in mind, the latter have been unable to agree upon any one man.

H. B. McCormac, Winchester woolen mill owner and former president of the Virginia Manufacturers Association, has been urged to make the race, but has said that he can not run. C. Bascom Slemp, Henry W. Anderson and Robert Angell, State chairman, also have informed friends that they will not be candidates because of the pressure of personal business. J. W. Rivercomb, Clifton Forge lawyer, is being mentioned. Leaders believe if he is nominated he will accept.

There has been talk of selecting the enatorial candidate from one of the three districts in which Republican congressmen are up for reelection this fall in order to strenghen their chances of victory Joseph T. Shaffer, in the Ninth District; J. A. Garber, in the Seventh District, and Menalacus Lankford, in the Second, come before the voters in November after two years' service.

Rivercomb From Tenth.

Rivercomb, however, comes from the Tenth District, which is served by Representative H. St. George Tucker, who is expected to be reelected.

Republicans admit there is little chance of defeating Glass, feeling that this is another Democratic year in Virginia. The leaders, however, want to place a candidate in the field in order to preserve the party organization.

CHAMBER TO FIGHT NAVY PLANT CLOSE

Action on Alexandria Torpedo Station to Wait Return of Secretary Adams.

WAS BUILT IN 1918

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Alexandria Naval Torpedo Station will be closed shortly, if the recommendation of Acting Secretary of the Navy Jahncke receives favorable consideration. The report of the Acting Secretary states that the maintenance of the plant during the past fiscal year cost $79,527, and he contends that the plant could be closed without interfering with naval efficiency, and that a saving of virtually the entire amount of its cost would be effected. He suggests that if the Navy should require storage space for its torpedoes, which are now kept in the Alexandria plant, such storage may be found at the Washington Navy Yard. The closing of the plant will not be determined upon, it is understood, until after the return of Secretary Adams to Washington.

Lieut. John Reizner, U. S. N., the officer in charge of the local plant, states that he has received no official notice of the proposed closing, and that in his opinion the status of the plant will not be changed. Dan S. Hollenga, business manager of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, stated that he proposes to wait on the Secretary of the Navy and urge that the plant be not closed.

The Alexandria naval torpedo station, which was erected on the water front at a cost of more than $1,000,000, was opened in 1918, and for several years thereafter was used for the manufacture and storage of torpedoes and as a base from which tests were conducted. The plant was designed to employ approximately 1,500 men at its maximum efficiency, although that number of employes was never reached. After several years of operation the manufacture of torpedoes was transferred to another station and the activities of the local plant gradually waned until there was employed only a custodian's force. Several efforts to restore the activities of the plant have been made without avail, and several propositions have been made to the Navy Department to lease the plant for some other industry, but nothing has ever come of any of the propositions.

The building is of steel and concrete construction, with a wharf large enough to accommodate the largest vessels which can ply the Potomac. It is one of the most modern and up-to-date shop buildings in this section, and was equipped with the latest and most expensive machinery for the manufacture of torpedoes.

The Virginia Chapter and Holy Cross Alumnae will give a tea next Thursday from 5 to 7 o'clock, at the Belle Haven Country Club in honor of the delegates to the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae biennial convention to be held on August 23 to 27, in Emmitsburg, Md., following the pilgrimage of the delegation to Mount Vernon. Miss Julia Catogni, of Richmond, will represent the State of Virginia Chapter and the local Holy Cross Alumnae will be represented by Mrs. E. E. Downham, jr., Miss Helen Nugent, Mrs. Frances T. Quinn, Miss Mary Quinn, Miss Minnie Jenkins, Miss Margaret Shuman, Miss Frances Shuman, Miss Eleanor Nugent, Mrs. Ernest Riley, Miss Emily Lannon and Miss Anna Mess, of this city, and Mrs. Philip Warren, Miss Edwardina Warren, Miss Mattie Crilly and Miss Eva Crilly, of Washington.

The Willard Chapter, Women's Christian Temperance Union, will hold a meeting at 8 o'clock tonight with Mrs. Oscar B. Pierpont, at her home, 114 North Columbus street, when officers for the year will be elected.

The Rev. Pierce S. Ellis, pastor of the First Baptist Church, was the speaker at the union services held last night in the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

STATE TO BEAUTIFY SCHOOL LANDSCAPES

Scenic Architect to Be Made Available to Communities Requesting Service.

COST IS AT MINIMUM

Richmond, Va., Aug. 24 (A.P.).—Through a cooperative arrangement between the Virginia Commission on Conservation and Development and the department of education, public schools in the State are to have the services without cost of a landscape architect to improve their grounds.

The conservation and development commission, through its chairman, William E. Carson, offered the services of B. E. Buerson, commission landscape architect, and the offer was immediately accepted. It will make possible an aid to school ground planning which the education department has sought for six years, but has been unable to obtain because of lack of funds.

It will be necessary for each school to furnish funds and facilities for growing, gathering shrubbery and the like, and B. V. Long, State school architect, said he believed parent-teacher associations, community leagues and garden clubs would be glad to take advantage of the offer of an architect to direct such work.

As far as is possible, it is intended to plant only Virginia shrubs and trees on the grounds.

"This is a program," said Mr. Long, "which we have tried to develop, but due to a lack of funds the board of education has been unable to do so. We feel that it is an excellent opportunity to accomplish what the State needs badly."

Fourteen schools were selected by the education department, according to their geographical location, so as to make each a sort of local example, and these will be worked over first. Mr. Buerson will visit these schools next week. They are as follows:

Northampton County, at Exmore, Willis Wharf; New Kent County, at New Kent; Lancaster County, at Lively; Henrico County, Ridge School; Prince George and Dinwiddie Counties, at Carson; Powhatan County, at Powhatan; Stafford County, at Stafford; Frederick County, at Middletown; Winchester Grammar School; Bedford County at Montvale; Roanoke County, at Fort Lewis; Smith County, at Atkins or Chilhowie; Fairfax County, at Fairfax Court House; Pauquier County at Upperville.

Memorandums are to be sent to county and city superintendents advising them of the service and inviting requests.

G.A.R. SPEAKER HITS CONFEDERACY GROUP

"Daughters" Declared Guilty of Spreading Propaganda "Even in Capital."

AT OHIO ENCAMPMENT

Cincinnati, Ohio, Aug. 24 (A.P.).—J. W. Willett, Iowa, judge-advocate and past commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, speaking before the national organization of Federated Patriotic Societies today, said: "You must stand ever ready to combat the baleful influence of that other group of women, the Daughters of the Southern Confederacy."

"I have had ample opportunity," he concluded, "to see the workings of this influence, and it is one that we must guard against. There are still those who believe the Stars and Bars stood for something pure and noble."

Past Commander in Chief John R. King, Maryland, addressing the same group, said: "It should be one of the purposes of these affiliated organizations to protect the country from what I warn you is its worst enemy—the Daughters of the Confederacy. I warn you they are busy everywhere spreading their propaganda. Even in Washington they are active.

"As evidence of this I can state that through their efforts the Marine Band has been sent many times to various gatherings and historic places in the South, while the Grand Army of the Republic never has had the Marine Band before now, and their presence is due to the energetic efforts of our commander in chief, Edwin J. Foster."

The general public had its first opportunity to participate in the sixty-fourth national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic in Eden Park here today, where trees and a flagpole were dedicated, and the United States Marine Band gave a concert.

Trees were dedicated by the Woman's Relief Corps to the memory of William C. Johnson, commander in chief of the G. A. R. 20 years ago, who died two months after his election; Clara Barton, head of the Red Cross and famous Civil War nurse, and the present commander in chief, Edwin J. Foster, of Massachusetts. The third tree was accepted by Mr. Foster in person, who delivered a short address. The flagstaff, erected in the park in memory of the Union veterans of the Civil War, was dedicated by the Daughters of Union Veterans.

Four Held on Charges Of Stealing Automobile

Four colored persons were arrested last night in College Park Md., as they were riding toward Washington in an auto reported stolen from a Baltimore resident a few hours before. All those arrested gave Baltimore address.

John L. Peters, of Baltimore, was said to have been driving the allegedly teolen car. With him were George Harris, Mrs. Abbey Washington, and Mrs. Mary Batty. H. Levin, of Baltimore, reported the car stolen. The prisoners had a preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace Phillips at Berwyn and were held for trial in Prince Georges County Police Court Wednesday.

William Lucas Leaves Hospital, Despite Advice

Special to The Washington Post.

Chestertown, Md., Aug. 24.—William Lucas, of Washington, D. C., who was injured on the head late yesterday at the Chester River Yacht Club regatta here when the outboard motorboat he was driving plunged headlong into a long sailing canoe, left the Easton Emergency Hospital last night, where he was taken after the accident, against the advice of surgeons there, who believe he may have a fractured skull. He refused to submit to an X-ray examination.

The motorboat is said to be owned by Philander C. Knox, jr., of Washington, for whom Lucas was driving. Both boats were damaged. Lucas has returned to Washington. He was unconscious when admitted to the hospital.

Next Royal Baby Expected By Italian House of Savoy

Specialists Pay Visits to Princess Marie Jose of Italy.

Brussels, Aug. 24 (A.P.).—The next royal baby expected in Europe was reported here today to be a little prince or princess of the House of Savoy, child of the former Belgian Princess Marie Jose and Crown Prince Humbert of Italy.

These reports have reached the homeland of the princess from Italy, where she has recently been visited by several specialists. The baby is expected to be a "winter baby," arriving probably in January, or just a year after the marriage of the couple.

Princess Marie Jose has lately been a little ailing, but no serious complications are foreseen. She and the crown prince plan to spend the autumn in the Castle of Raconiggi, a mountain stronghold in Piedmont resembling Glamis Castle, where a royal baby last week was born to the Duchess of York.

It was in this castle that Crown Prince Humbert was born, and it was given to the couple by King Victor Emmanuel as a wedding present.

Cousin Conducts Last Rite for West Virginia Fighter.

Logan, W. Va., Aug. 24 (A.P.).—William Anderson "Cap" Hatfield, last of the active participants in the bloody Hatfield-McCoy feuds of the '80's, was buried here today. He died Friday in a Baltimore hospital at the age of 67.

"Cap" Hatfield was laid to rest under a grove of sugar trees, a favorite spot on his homestead and less than a mile from the resting place of his father, "Devil Anse" Hatfield, who led his clan in years of mountain warfare with the McCoys, of Kentucky.

Funeral services were conducted by a cousin, the Rev. Joseph Hatfield, of Matewah, W. Va.

Mr. Hart, in declaring that only a nominal bond should be assessed in liquor cases, leaving it up to his office, the judges of the Police Court or the United States commissioner to ask a higher bond, if necessary, upon arraignment of the defendant, stated that police were promiscuous in their charges when they made a liquor case.

Luray Financier Named Drought Unit Chairman

Special to The Washington Post.

Luray, Va., Aug. 24.—V. H. Ford, Luray financier, has been appointed chairman of the Page County drought relief committee by former Gov. Harry Flood Byrd. Mr. Byrd is chairman of a similar committee functioning throughout the 100 counties in Virginia.

Mr. Ford was on a visit to his farm in Illinois when his appointment was received in Luray. He says that his acceptance of the chairmanship of the local committee will depend on a fuller knowledge of the duties required. Four other members of the drought committee—one from each of the four magisterial districts of this county—will be appointed later.

GERMAN SEA FLIERS REACH NOVA SCOTIA

He asked that his request be kept secret.

Friday afternoon their big Dornier-Wal flying boat came down safely at Ivigtut. The next news the world had of them, they were on their way to Labrador. Just before pulling in their wireless serial last night, they reported they were preparing to land at Cartwright.

Throughout the flight the German Commercial Flying School authorities have said that they knew nothing of the captain's plans or preparations. Von Gronau is known as an excellent aviator and is greatly interested in the scientific and practical side of flying. Apparently he wished to avoid the usual publicity connected with transatlantic flights.

The flight from Cartwright to Queensport Harbor is roughly 600 miles. The Germans made the distance in 8 hours and 25 minutes. All the way across the Atlantic they have maintained an average flying speed of about 86 miles an hour, but fog today apparently slowed them down to about 70.

During the trip they were reported over the Magdalene Islands, 225 miles from Halifax, over St. Paul's Island, north of Cape Breton, and over North Sydney, Nova Scotia.

Fliers Go to Bed.

Queensport, Nova Scotia, Aug. 24 (A.P.).—Four modest and weary air heroes from Germany who dropped in on Nova Scotia this afternoon after one of the least advertised transatlantic flights on record, went to bed here tonight after flying in three days from Iceland to Greenland, Labrador and Nova Scotia.

Their Dornier-Wal flying boat, used in the polar regions by the late Roald Amundsen and again by Capt. Courtney, of England, in an attempted transatlantic flight, came down on the harbor here this afternoon from Labrador.

Forced down by fog, encountered during almost the entire trip from Greenland, Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau and his three companions were in good condition and pleased with the success of their hard flight.

Intend to Go to New York.

When the weather clears, which they hope will be tomorrow, they will leave for Halifax, refuel, and then continue to New York. Supplies of gasoline and oil have been stored for them at Halifax, roughly 130 miles away.

Speaking of the object of his flight, Captain Von Gronau said it was part of the program of the Commercial Aviation School on the Island of Sylt, near Warenemuende, Germany, of which he is the head. Each year the school sponsors a long flight, bt this hop across the Atlantic is the longest ever yet undertaken.

Interviewers found the captain and his companions very modest regarding their brilliant achievement. With the exception of fog, no difficulty was encountered, said the captain.

Soon after leaving Greenland, they lost the radio generator. Fortunately, a spare one was carried and the loss occasioned no trouble. The airmen would have been able to make Halifax had their charts been sufficiently detailed. As it was, they thought it best to land here. The radio was chiefly used in supplying weather reports, the captain said.

New Cave Is Found By Boy Near Luray

Fantastic Formations Rival in Beauty Many Others in Valley.

Special to The Washington Post.

Luray Va., Aug. 24.—Another cave, rivaling in beauty many of the caverns in the Shenandoah Valley, has been discovered in the village of Newport, this county, 12 miles southeast of Luray. Yesterday half a dozen men penetrated four or five chambers of the newly discovered cave.

A little son of John Hitt, on whose land the cave has been found, made the discovery while at play. A small rock turned over on the surface of the ground revealed a small hole. Hurriedly the Hitt boy removed other rocks. Finally the opening was large enough to admit his boy's body.

Rock formations of many shapes and colors—translucent, blue and some almost black—adorn the newly discovered cave. The formations are fantastic and similar to many of the caverns throughout the Shenandoah Valley.

Man Beaten in Fight By One-Armed Enemy

A one-armed man, for whom Seventh Precinct police are looking, in a fist fight last night on Prospect avenue near Wisconsin avenue northwest severely beat Martin L. Berger, 28 years old, of 608 Lamont street northwest, who was treated at Georgetown Hospital for contusions over the right eye and severe bruises about the face. Police said Berger told them he knew his adversary's name and intended to swear out a warrant for the man's arrest today.

He and Vice Consul Alexiadis both cabled their resignations to Athens.

ATTIC-LOVER KILLING JURY IS DEADLOCKED

Situation Held Hopeless, but Judge Orders It to Deliberate More.

STANDS 9 TO 3, RUMOR

Los Angeles, Aug. 24 (A.P.).—After two days of deliberation, the jury before which Mrs. Walburga Oesterreich was tried on a charge of murdering her husband, Fred C. Oesterreich, wealthy Milwaukee garment manufacturer, sent word to Superior Judge Carlos S. Hardy late today it was "hopelessly deadlocked."

Judge Hardy instructed bailiffs to take the six women and six men from the jury room to the hotel, in which they have been locked each night since the trial began three weeks ago. He told the jurors to rest tonight and resume deliberation at 9 a. m. tomorrow.

Mrs. Oesterreich was indicted last April with Otto Sanhuber for the murder which occurred August 22, 1922, but obtained a separate trial. Sanhuber, confessed secret tenant of the Oesterreich attics here and in Milwaukee for more than a decade, was convicted of manslaughter and freed by the statute of limitations. He said he lived in hiding so he could be near Mrs. Oesterreich, whom he lived.

Mrs. esterreichs trial closed Friday, but Judge Hardy delayed his instructions to the jury until Saturday morning. He told the talesmen they could return convictions of first or second degree murder, or manslaughter, or could acquit Mr. esterreich. The woman knowing a manslaughter verdict would free her, expressed satisfaction at the instructions.

Although no official word had been received from the jurors, rumors about the courtroom were the talesmen stood 9 to 3, the majority voting for conviction on second-degree murder.

Sanhuber confessed he shot Oesterreich, who he believed to be injuring the woman in a quarrel, but repudiated the confession during his trial. He said he locked Mrs. Oesterreich in a closet telling her she must inform police burglars did it. Mrs. Oesterreich testified Sanhuber killed her husband.

STERLING VICTOR IN TEXAS ELECTION

opportunity for State-wide service when he accepted an appointment as chairman of Gov. Dan Moody's highway commission three and one-half years ago.

Opposed to the Houston man, who is a novice at stump speaking, was James E. Ferguson, one of the most adept campaigners that Texas has produced in many years, who bore the brunt of the campaign for his wife. Seldom has a campaign been as bitter. Immediately after his first primary, Sterling said the issues were "Fergusonism" and honesty in government, and "Farmer Jim" replied with character attacks on Sterling and Governor Moody.

Sterling and Mrs. Ferguson were high among eleven candidates in the first primary. Mrs. Ferguson led the field in the July race. As she did not have a majority of votes cast, however, the run-off race was held.

The Houston man was born on a southeast Texas farm. He quit school in the third grade to help earn a living for the family and did not learn to read and write until after he was 21 years old. For a time he was a freight boat boy and then he successively became a country storekeeper and country banker.

Next he became interested in oil, which gave him his millions. He formed the Humble Oil Company, which grew to be a giant concern, and managed its affairs until a few years ago, when he sold his holdings.

Democratic nominations for six State offices and one congressional post were voted upon in yesterday's run-off.

In all other contests, none of the candidates received more than 50 per cent of the vote in the first primary. The Democratic nomination ordinarily is tantamount to election.

The Republicans did not hold a run-off primary, having selected Dr. George C. Butte, of Austin, in July as their standard bearer in the governor's race.

Guinn Williams, incumbent, apparently had won the Thirteenth District Democratic congressional nomination from B. D. Sartin. With returns from ten to twelve counties tabulated, Williams had 20,386 votes; Sartin, 17,481.

State Senator Edgar E. Witt, of Waco, had a lead of 60,000 votes over Sterling P. Strong, of Dallas, one-time State superintendent of the Antisaloon League, in the lieutenant governor's race. The vote was, Witt, 399,488, and Strong, 339,105.

James V. "Jimmy" Allred, 31-year-old Wichita Falls attorney, scored an easy victory in the attorney general's race over Robert Lee Bobbitt, incumbent. The latest tabulation gave Allred 443,933 votes to 320,839 for Bobbitt.

Former Gov. Pat M. Neff's majority in the railroad commission race was more than 100,000 votes on the latest tabulation. Neff is at present a member of the commission.

Cumberland Fair Opens For Six-Day Exhibition

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 24.—The annual Cumberland Fair opens tomorrow for a six-day exhibition with added features, one of which is a dog show with more than 100 entries. The fair has grown to great proportions in the past few years, pari-mutuel betting having been a great incentive to attendance.

Aside from this there has been increased interest in the agricultural, horticultural, live stock and domestic features, due to the organization of numerous homemakers, 4-H and other clubs in the farming sections. It has been found that the drought will have little effect on the number or quality of exhibits.

AIR TRAVEL REPORT SENT TO PRESIDENT

Figures Disclose Extent of Industry; 45 Firms Are Listed.

120,000 MILES EACH DAY

In the last four years, he said, approximately $8,500,000 had been spent on airways, with an annual maintenance cost of $5,000,000.

The Federal airways system, he said, was being developed in accordance with well-defined plans and could be likened to the aid the Government had given shipping.

Three transcontinental routes are included in the program. One between New York and San Francisco is in day and night operation; another between New York and Los Angeles is being built, and the third, a southern airway between New York and San Diego, is partially completed.

Approximately 15,000 miles of airways are equipped for night flying, 4,465 having been established in the past eighteen months. Thirty thousand additional miles of airways are to be lighted during the present fiscal year.

Of the approximately 1,650 airports and landing fields throughout the United States, about 500 are municipally owned, 535 commercially owned, and 330 are intermediate landing fields established on airways by the Commerce Department. Also there are 206 auxiliary, 74 Army and Navy and seven miscellaneous fields.

The number of unlicensed pilots was given as 13,867, licensed pilots, 8,960 and unlicensed planes as 2,086.

"Approximately 150,000 passengers were carried on the scheduled air transport lines in 1929," the report said, "and in the light of present indications, this total will increase to at least 200,000 for the calendar year."

there. Seeing the uniformed officer, he evidently thought he was about to be arrested, and fired.

A dozen passengers in the coach fled to the depot platform as the train stopped. The conductor was held at bay by Frenett for several minutes. Then as the train from the West arrived Frenett fled down the aisle. As he reached the platform, Jones was about to board the coach. Frenett shot him in the neck, and then fled into the darkness.

A posse was formed, and several hundred shots were exchanged with Frenett, who had barricaded himself in a house five miles west of Emo before he finally decided to make a dash for a nearby woods. As he ran out of the house, a volley was fired at him and he dropped with three wounds.

He was taken to a hospital at Emo, where he died at 4:30 p. m. In a statement to a physician before he died, Frenett intimated he had been despondent as the result of a series of misfortunes. He said he thought the American officers were after him, and he had heard they were quick to shoot, so he decided to shoot first.

Fight Results Fatally; Young Man Arested

A fight between uncle and nephew, both Negroes, at Accokeek, Md., late Saturday night resulted in the death yesterday of the uncle, Sylvester Dyson, of Twelfth street near K street northwest, in Emergency Hospital.

Detectives of the homicide squad and Deputy Sheriff A. W. Hepburn, of Prince Georges County, Md., last night arrested Charles Sylvester Dyson, 24 years old, of Sixth street near M street northwest, and charged him with being a fugitive from justice from Maryland. The Negro will be turned over to the Maryland authorities. An automobile jack, said to be the weapon used in the fight, is being held as evidence.

Bulging Shirt Front Leads to Rum Arrest

A bulging shirt front led to the arrest of George Honesty, colored, 31 years old, yesterday afternoon near his home on Thirtieth street near K street northwest on charges of possessing one-half gallon of liquor.

Seventh Precinct Policeman W. O'Connor said he spied Honesty walking with difficulty with a suspiciously large "stomach" and that a chase started when he began to make an investigation. Through a nearby vacant house and out into a nearby alley the pursuit went until the arrest was made.

FURTHER BUSINESS DECLINES REPORTED

Production and Employment Reach Lowest Levels During Ju.yl

MONEY RATES ARE EASY

(Associated Press.)

Further declines in business activity in July were reported yesterday in the monthly review of the Federal Reserve Board, disclosing the lowest levels in recent years for industrial production and factory employment.

The ravages of the drought added to the pessimistic picture of conditions in the nation painted by the masters of figures at the Treasury.

However, the report showed that money rates continued easy and that a sharp downward movement in wholesale prices continued through July. This was offset some time early in August when the prices of grain advanced as a result of the drought.

The Reserve Board's review stated that factory employment and wage payments were at the lowest level since 1922. The reduction in workers was largest at steel and automobile plants, car shops and foundaries, hosiery and cotton mills, and clothing factories. A seasonal increase in employment in the canning, flour and shot industries was reported but the Department of Agriculture showed an "unusually small demand for farm labor."

The drought was said to have effected "feed crops and pasturage severely," although the Government's statement reckoned it had been broken in mid August.

HIDE IN THE DARK

By FRANCES NOYES HART
Author of "The Bellamy Trial"

From the Beginning.

"The beginning was when Doug King called to me from the head of those stairs * * * I was a good deal annoyed at his calling me in that way; he had been worrying me a good deal all evening, partly because he'd been rather insolent, but principally because I could see that he was doing his level best to start a quarrel with Kit, and I was desperately anxious not to have that happen. You see, Kit had come back to us, after such a long, long time—and I didn't want him to be forced by any ugly brawling or scandal into going away again—I mean really away, out of our reach—I was willing to go to any lengths of compromise and conciliation to prevent it. So that was why I went up to Doug when he called as though he were the landlord of this inn and I were a docile barmaid.

"I went to him just as eagerly and docilely as that barmaid, and with no more sinister intentions. Doug was waiting at the head of the stairs. He said, 'Come to my room, will you? There's something I want to show you.' I said, 'but, Doug, what is it? Can't you bring it here?' He put his hand on my wrist, and said, 'no. I didn't get you up here to argue with me. I got you here to tell you a few things.' His voice was as hard and coarse as a—as a mule driver's, and his face was hard and coarse, too—I said, 'Very well, I'll come. But take your hand off my wrist, please.' He didn't take it off; he clamped it down a little harder and pulled me after him down the corridor to his room. * * * It's the farthest room down the north corridor, and for a moment I thought that there must have been a window left open in it—it looked blown to pieces.

A Room in Disorder.

"One of the muslin window curtains was down, and there was a chair tipped over, with a lot of clothes sprawling away from it, and one end of the dressing table was swept quite clear. I could see the little leather boxes and an empty glass and some brushes and collar buttons scattered almost to the door. After a second or so I realized that it couldn't have been rain or wind; there wasn't even a spatter of rain anywhere.

"I tried to pull my wrist away, and I asked, 'What happened here, Doug?' He said, 'Oh, nothing. Your precious Kit tried to break my neck, that's all. If he tries it again, I'll break his—with a rope.'

"I said, 'Is that what you called me up here to tell me?' And he said, 'No. Come over here.' . . . I knew exactly what they meant, the first time that I saw them; there were four of them, lying there on the desk, and the one nearest me—the ace of spades—had a little shower of red drops spraying across its face. They were the four aces from Kit's pack of cards we'd been playing with—the four aces you have there, Gavin. And before I could turn my eyes away, I knew why Doug had brought me to his room to see them.

"After a minute he took my finger and drew it down across the nearest one. In the center I could feel something small and rough, like—like a fairy nutmeg grater. It made me—it made me feel deathly sick and I tried to pull my finger away, but he wouldn't let me. He stood there pressing down, and smiling at me * * * dreadfully. After a minute he said, 'These belong to that precious blackguard of yours. If you're a very, very good child, I'm going to give them to you for a wedding present.' I said, 'What do you mean?' And Doug said, 'What I say. I have proof right here that he's a swindler and a cardsharp, and if we don't strike a bargain in the next five minutes, I'm going to light a fuse that will blow him straight from here to hell. It'll take me just about ten minutes to ring up every paper in Washington and tell them that that well-known sportsman, Mr. Christopher Baird, has been caught out cold cheating an exclusive little group of his best friends at poker. And just for good luck I'll call the police in on it, too, and lodge a charge of criminal assault. He damn near killed me trying to get these cards away, and some one on the other side of that door knew it, too.'

Her Answer.

"I asked, 'What is it that you want me to do?' Doug laughed, and let go my finger. He said, 'It's five minutes to 12. I want to give you plenty of time to think things over. Big hearted, that's what I am! But if you haven't been able by the end of the first round of Hide in the Dark to make up your mind to invite your guests to another of these delightful little reunions about Saturday to celebrate the wedding of young Mrs. Marsden to young Mr. Douglas King, I'm very much afraid that I'll have to use the phone to Washington.'

"You know, Gavin, the funny part is that when he said that I didn't feel anything at all—not anything. My head felt suddenly quite light and empty and peaceful, you know the way it does after the second breath of ether. I thought, 'This isn't real. This is a dream, nothing matters in dreams.' I went by him to the door and opened it. Doug said, 'That's your answer, is it? I'm to turn your lover over to the well-known mercies of the law and the press' 'I said 'No, no—my answer's yes, of course. I'll ask them for Saturday just as soon as the game's over. May I have the cards.' He picked them up and put them in his pocket, and when he got close enough to put his hand on my shoulder he said, 'My dear girl, do I look like that particular brand of jackass? If you're a good, obedient little wife and do just exactly what Doug says, you shall have one whole one a year—and just to show you what a lucky girl you are, I'll start you off next Saturday with the ace of spades.' * * * One a year—that's four years, * * * I said, 'Very well. Then that's all, isn't it? Let's go down.' My head still had that heavenly light feeling, but it felt a little giddy, too, and I reached for the edge of the card table and stood leaning against it.

"I could hear you all talking and could hear my voice answering, but if you were to tear me into pieces, Gavin, I couldn't tell you what we said. Because there right under my fingers, lying on top of these scattered cards and poker chips, was that knife—that little knife that Doug had said was so sharp * * * I was still staring at it when the lights went out; and when Doug crossed over to Jill by the window I could feel how cold the blade was and I wondered whether it was as sharp as Doug said * * * I wasn't paying much attention that they were whispering, but suddenly I heard something about the purloined letter—and then Doug said quite clearly, 'How about the big sofa—the one by the fire'—and knew—I knew perfectly what he meant. I had that chiffon hankerchief knotted around my wrist; I unknotted it and wrapped it round the knife, and started for the hall. Every one was running and calling by then, and I called to them to wait for me, and ran on after them, up the stairs * * * I came straight down them again after the gong sounded."

Lindy paused, staring down at the twisted pearls between her fingers—After a long moment she said softly, "That's really all, isn't it? * * * He must have thought it was Jill when I came up behind him, because he didn't move or make a sound * * * I dried my hands on the chiffon handkerchief after I threw the knife away, but I must have got the blood on the violets when I bent over to get the cards out of his pocket. I slipped them into the front of my dress and walked out into the hall just a second or so before Jill screamed. That scream—that scream nearly rocked the earth out from under me. I didn't know that Jill was anywhere near, and for one ghastly moment I thought that I'd gone mad, and that I was making that hideous noise myself. And then I heard you all running and shouting, and falling over things in the dark, and I knew that I wasn't mad at all—that nothing, nothing, no matter how dreadful it is, can drive you mad."

Gavin asked: "And it was you who put the cards under the record?"

"Yes. My bracelet caught as I slipped the last one in. I was coming back to get them and the handkerchief tomorrow."

"Where is this handkerchief, Lindy?"

"It's over there, stuck down in the corner of the big wing-chair by the window. Kit, will you get it, please? I don't—I don't want to touch it."

The red-haired young man laid the two scraps of pencil neatly on the mantel, and crossed the room without a glance at the fragile loveliness deep in the green chair.

A Bit of Acting.

"There's one more thing that I want to tell you before you do—whatever you ought to do with me," she said, her eyes still on the pearls. "I didn't realize for one moment—for one second—how hideously this was going to involve all the rest of you. I thought that my mind was working beautifully, but I don't believe that it could have been, because I was absolutely sure that if they couldn't prove that any one of us did it, we'd all be immune. I didn't realize at all that it actually made every person here vulnerable. I only wanted—dreadfully—to be happy. I still want to be * * * That's what makes me so wicked."

Kit Baird said from the corner by the window: "There's no hankerchief here, Lindy."

And Lindy flashed by the group of figures, lighter than wind.

"There is—there is—down here in the corner—." She raised a white face above empty hands and said in a strange little voice, "Oh—you took it. Give it back to me, Kit."

The red-headed young man said equably: "I haven't laid eyes on that handkerchief since midnight. And I strongly suspect, my child, that you know precisely where it is."

He removed his hands from his pockets and circled her wrist with two of his fingers, lightly and inflexibly. "Cold, aren't you? Come back to the fire for a minute, then, and let me present the leading tragedienne of the age to the assembled company.

"Ladies and gentlemen: Rachel and Duse and Siddons herself must have died again of envy under their laurel wreaths this last half hour. I've seen some fairly good ones myself in my day, but never anything that could remotely touch this." His fingers closed faster about the slim wrist as he swung her toward him. "Look at me, Lindy."

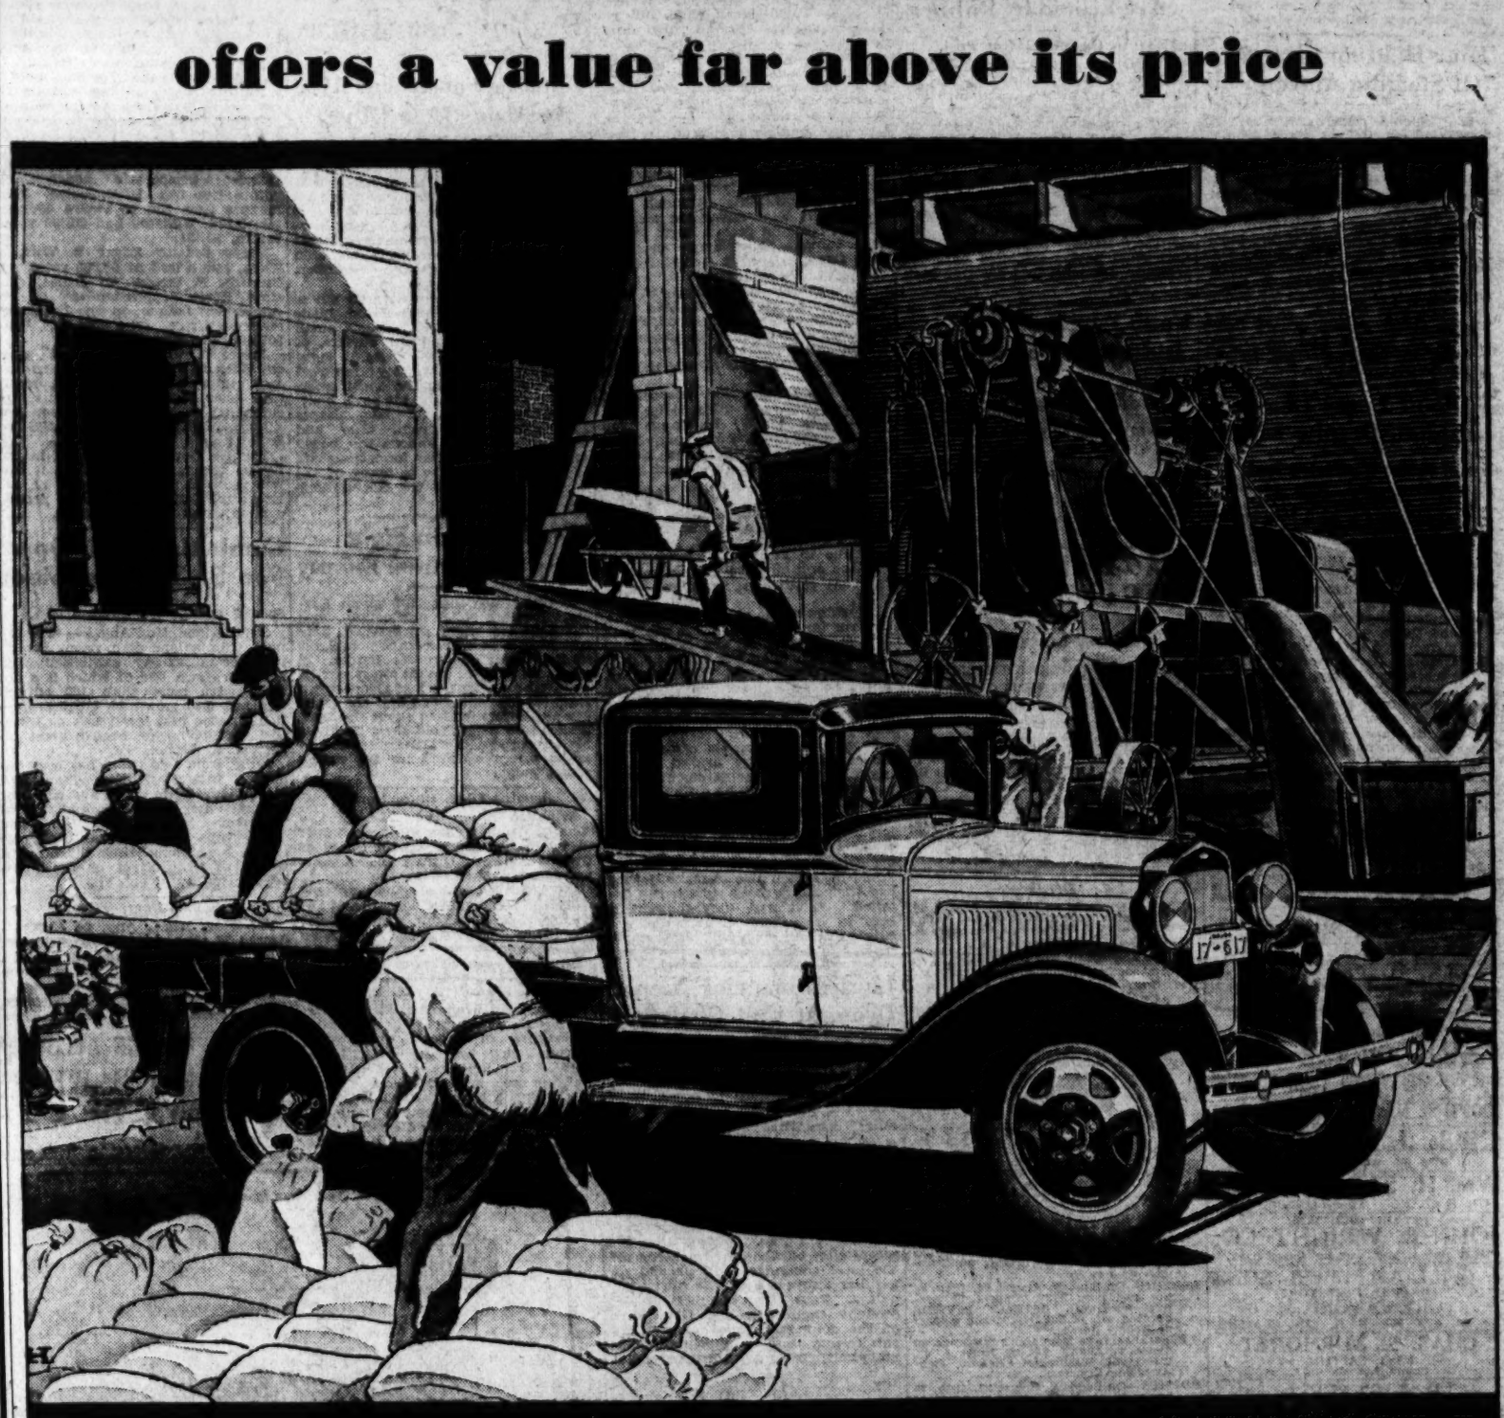
The Ford Truck
offers a value far above its price



FOR almost every business enterprise where there is hauling to be done, the Ford 1½-ton truck offers able performance for the work, reliable strength, long life, low first cost, and economy of operation. Not in a few fields, but in many, the Ford truck has found a place. In all of these, it is serving faithfully and well.

Closely related to your satisfaction with the Ford truck are features of its construction which reduce the cost of maintenance. Forty different kinds of steel are used in the chassis. Each of these is especially designed to resist strain, wear, or fatigue in the part for which it is employed.

The crankshaft and camshaft, for example, are of Ford carbon manganese steel. Valves are of chrome silicon alloy. The front axle is a chrome-alloy steel forging. These and many other special steels prolong the life of the truck, increase its ability to do hard work, and reduce the necessity for adjustments or repair.

New features of the truck are the spiral bevel gear rear axle, which has a straddle-mounted pinion; the two gear-ratios optional; the larger brakes; heavier front axle and spring; 4-speed transmission; provision for power take-off mounting; and the dual rear wheels, available at small additional cost.

Standard bodies, which are the stake, platform, and panel types, are mounted on the chassis with 131½-inch wheelbase. A chassis with 157-inch wheelbase is available for carrying light but bulky loads.

Go to your Ford dealer and see this truck. The closer your inspection of its chassis and bodies, the more you will appreciate that it is a value far in excess of the cost.

STOCKS BEFORE CRASH HELD 15 PER CENT HIGH

198 Presidents Answer Questionnaire by Fisher

Average Estimates Given as to Proper Level of Common Industrials, Rails and Public Utilities; Price Right at Break, 35 Say.

By IRVING FISHER,
Professor of Economics, Yale University
Special to The Washington Post.

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 24.—Was the price level of common stocks too high before the crash of 1929? Will it return to its height before the crash?

My daily index of common industrial stocks recorded November 13, 1929, a bottom 42 per cent below the peak of September 5, with a shrinkage of values on the New York Stock Exchange by $26,000,000,000. Nevertheless, in my book "The Stock Market Crash—and After," written in December, 1929, I expressed the opinion that a sharp increase in the Federal Reserve discount rate between the fall of 1928 and the spring of 1929 would have produced a gradual decline in the peak of stock prices and prevented the crash, adding that prices "would have shown a level, say, 15 per cent below the peak actually attained in September."

My early provisional opinion seems now to be confirmed by the average estimate of 198 presidents of companies out of 825 listed on the New York Stock Exchange. This estimate, as of July 18, 1930, was elicited by a questionnaire sent by me to the chief executives of all corporations listed on the exchange. It is to the effect that the level of stock prices before the crash was only about 15 per cent too high.

This is quite different from the popular impression. The general comment during the stock market crash, and thereafter, was to the effect that the level of stock prices has been extravagantly inflated.

Undoubtedly there was undue speculative inflation of stock prices at the culmination of the long bull market on September 5, 1929. The crash was preceded, accompanied and followed by a business depression. But now that enough time has elapsed for careful appraisal of the situation, the average estimate of men whose seasoned opinion should be heeded, is that the general level of the market at its height was not as much too high as commonly believed. My daily index of industrials showed, as already stated, a fall of 42 per cent from September 6, 1929, to November 13 following; my weekly index shows a fall of 38 per cent, which had been retrieved since then by only 6.2 per cent up to August 9, 1930.

Prospects Little Discounted.

But the present low level of stock prices seems to be more affected by the business depression and immediate reductions in earnings than by the prospects of business, once it shakes itself free from the after-effects of panic and depression. If the judgment of corporate executives whose stocks have experienced this decline is a guide, the stock price level must some fine day recover with a return of the unparalleled commercial prosperity and stability which marked the seven years prior to the crash.

Analyzing the questionnaire, of the 846 replies from the 825 presidents of listed corporations, I found that 198 were specific enough to be tabulated. The questionnaire was drawn in the form of a secret ballot to be marked, but not signed, so as to insure that the identity of individuals and companies should be unrevealed and to insure that no executive would have any temptation to conceal any weaknesses of his own company. This questionnaire had been preceded by a tentative form for criticism only, not to be filled out, in which it was stated that the "essential factor affecting the price of any security is the future earnings."

As basis for discussion it was noted that the future earnings of common stocks, unlike those of preferred stocks or bonds, are unknown. Only their past earnings can be definitely known. When the future earnings are expected to increase, the price of the stock will anticipate this increase and so be higher, relatively, to past earnings, than would be justified if there were no such increase expected. It might be added that there are just three factors which establish stock prices, namely, earnings, chances or risks and the rate of interest. That is, the various possibilities of future earning, the respective probabilities that they will be realized, and the rate at which they are discounted determine market price.

Contributory Factors.

Under these three heads there are, of course, innumerable special causes. Some of these may be mentioned, such as management and policy; the money market conditions; patents, charters, and franchises; attitude of government; capital investments, both as to kind and ratio to turnover; reinvestment of earnings; nature and conditions of a particular business, and of business in general; financial structure, including ratio of common stocks to senior securities; provision for depreciation; unused facilities, natural or artificial; risks of enterprise; merger possibilities; inventions, actual and potential, and probable changes in fashion or consumption, physical assets available in case of bankruptcy; amount and distribution of stock outstanding; the "stock-mindedness" of the public, or its speculative urge; dividend history; "scarcity value" of stock; and market rumors.

But all of these causes fall under one or another of the three categories of earnings, chances or risks, and the rate of interest.

The replies of 64 corporation presidents were to the effect that the price of their stocks at the peak of the market on September 5, 1929, and prior to the stock market break, was "about right."

Four chief executives regarded the price of their stocks as too high by 5 per cent; 20 regarded it as too high by 10 per cent; 35, by 20 per cent; 26, by 30 per cent, and 15, by 50 per cent, while 10 regarded stock prices as too high by more than 50 per cent.

Many Thought Highs "About Right."

On the other hand, the following regarded their particular stock as too low: 1, too low by 5 per cent; 10, by 10 per cent; 7, by 20 per cent; 3, by 30 per cent; 2, by 50 per cent, and 1, by more than 50 per cent.

It will be noted that the largest number of replies from these corporation executives listed on the New York Stock Exchange stated, in their opinion, that their particular stock prices prior to the break were "about right." The next largest number, that is, 35 corporation executives, considered that their particular stock prices were 20 per cent too high.

If we try to take an average opinion of those replying who considered that their particular stock price at the height of the 1929 market were too high, we find by a mathematical average of the above percentages, ranging from 5 per cent upward, properly weighted by the number of companies, respectively, that the opinion was that their particular stocks were, on the average, 18 per cent too high at the culmination of the bull movement.

Those who estimated that their prices had been too low, expressed the opinion that their particular stocks were, on the average, 18 per cent too low before the break.

Of course, 198 replies out of 825 may not be wholly representative, although no reason seems manifest why they should not be. At any rate the replies of these 198 presidents of corporations listed on the New York Stock Exchange represent their considered opinion about the particular stocks of which they have precise and intimate knowledge. The replies are therefore submitted for what they may be worth. In short, the opinion of the "insiders" who had the best standpoint for judgment, if taken to represent the whole market, was that as the top of the bull movement of 1929 it was too high by only a relatively small extent, say between 10 and 20 per cent too high. It is of interest that they should make this average estimate at a time when stocks have again receded to a point close to the low of November, 1929.

STOCK PRICE LEVEL HAS UPWARD TURN

All Industrial Index Makes Slight Gains, Despite Weakness at Close.

BERLIN AND PARIS, RISE

By E. W. DIEFENDORF
(Irving Fisher Service).

The index of common industrial stocks on the New York Stock Exchange closed last week at 130.7, showing a gain of 2.6 per cent over the preceding week's close. The bullish movement that forced stock prices up at the close of the week ended August 15, continued its work on the price level through Wednesday, August 12, when the index reached 131.9. The oils and coppers groups alone dropped enough to show losses in the declining markets of the last two days of the week. These were drops of less than 2 per cent.

The remaining groups were up, with tobaccos in the lead, gaining by 5.9 per cent; stores up by 5.7 per cent. Steels were up by 5.1 per cent. The building supplies, miscellaneous and office equipment groups rose by 4 per cent each; agricultural equipment, auto accessories, chemicals, electrical equipment, foods, radios and utility groups were up by 3 per cent each; machinery and motors gained by 2 per cent each, and household products, rails and preferred groups by less than 1 per cent each.

Gains of over 4 per cent from their recent lows were made in the groups of tobacco, stores, steel, office equipment, electrical equipment, chemical and building supply stocks. Tobaccos, alone, are above their July 29 peak by 2.5 per cent. The radio and copper groups are more than 10 per cent below their July highs, with the market advantage off by only 5.5 per cent from its similar high.

Value of Tradings Off.

The average daily value of tradings in common industrial stocks on the New York Stock Exchange dropped 11 per cent last week to $36,500,000. But increasing interest was shown in tobacco, household products, building supplies and radios and amusements stocks, although the rise in the average daily value of tradings in no group exceeded $500,000.

Rails and utilities were among the groups that suffered in the decline, with American Telephone & Telegraph, North American National Power & Light, Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis and Seaboard Air Line values off by more than 30 per cent each. The electrical equipment stocks, steels, coppers, oils and machinery dropped in values by more than $1,000,000 each.

London Level Continues to Drop.

Stock prices on the London exchange displayed increasing weakness last week, dropping by 2.3 per cent to 69.3, or 30.7 per cent below the base level of 100 for the week of October 15, 1926.

From the second week in January of this year the level of London stock prices sagged to the week of March 5, when the trend was reversed and the level rose to the 1930 high of 99.6 in the week ended April 11. From this high to date, the level has declined in three major movements: April 11 to June 20 at 79.7, a total drop of 20 per cent and an average weekly drop of 2 per cent; June 20 to July 18 at 78.2 per cent, when prices were fairly stable, dropping by 1.9 per cent, or an average weekly drop of 0.5 per cent; and July 18 to date, with the rate of change at a maximum of 2.3 per cent per week, with a total drop of 11.4 per cent.

The trend of prices in Berlin and Paris was reversed last week, as the index of the Berlin exchange rose by 6.8 per cent and that of the Paris exchange rose by 0.7 per cent.

Groups Rise in Price.

The speculative group of stocks at last week's close was up by 3.9 per cent. Its trend rose through Thursday, dropping but slightly to the close. The investment group of stocks rose by 3.4 per cent, while the semiinvestment group gained by 1.7 per cent.

The highest and lowest classes of stocks have made the best showing in the recent slack market, showing gains of a little more than 5 per cent each over their August 12 lows, while semiinvestment stocks advanced by only 1.7 per cent from the August 15 low.

Investment stocks at last week's close showed a gain of 8 per cent over the June 24 low, but 3 per cent below the July 28 high; speculative stocks, a gain of 5 per cent over the June 24 low and a loss of 8 per cent from the July 28 high; while semi-investment stocks gained 3 per cent over the August 15 low and lost 8 per cent from the July 28 high.

Below are shown index numbers of prices of common industrials on the New York Stock Exchange, arranged in classes derived from Moody's ratings.

Profit in Replacement Tires.

During years of slackness in automobile production, there is a tendency toward larger profits to the rubber tire manufacturers. This is because the tire makers make relatively small profits from sales to car manufacturers, whereas profits from tires sold for replacement are greater in a year when car owners elect not to trade in their old cars.

BOND PRICES HOLD AFTER STEADY GAINS

Rising Trends During Many Weeks Result in Top Quotations.

U. S. SECURITIES DROP

Bond prices resumed activity at last week's opening. They held steady at 101.7, the peak for this year, which is 0.07 per cent above the previous 1930 high of 101.6 on March 21. The trend of all-bonds has been climbing for seven successive weeks, closing last week at 101.7, 1.17 per cent above the index of 100.5 on July 1; an average daily gain of 0.03 per cent for 43 sessions.

There was a slight drop of 5 per cent, mainly seasonal, in the average daily value of tradings last week on the New York Stock Exchange.

33 Per Cent Drop Slightly.

Of the 70 bonds in the Irving Fisher selection 36 per cent advanced in price last week, 31 per cent were steady and 33 per cent dropped slightly from the preceding week's close.

First-grade rail bonds rose by 0.39 per cent last week, completing a 17-week rising trend. The weeks of June 6 and July 4 were the only weak spots. At 104.5 on August 22, the first-grade had made a total gain of 3.9 per cent over the April 23 low, topping the previous 1930 high of 102.9 on March 21 by 1.5 per cent, and the 1929 high of 100.9 on December 5, by 3.5 per cent.

Second-Grade Rails Gain.

Second-grade rails, industrial and public utility bonds completed seven consecutive weeks of rising prices, gaining by 2.17, 1.03 and 1.03 per cent, respectively, over their recent lows.

Utility bonds reached their peak on August 19 at 102.64, 0.66 per cent above the previous high of 101.97 on March 21. Industrial bonds at last week's high were 0.7 per cent below the 1930 high of 100.2 on April 4, and second-grade rail bonds were 2.4 per cent below their 1930 high of 106.6 on March 21.

Government bonds have shown an out-of-line movement, with foreign government securities 0.3 per cent below their recent high of 100.6 on August 11, despite the fact that the index at last week's close was up by 0.10 per cent from the preceding week's close. United States Government bonds dropped by 0.2 per cent last week, closing the week 0.4 per cent off from the August 12 high of 101.3.

New Freight Cars Put In Service Show Gain

(Associated Press.)

The American Railway Association reported yesterday that 58,660 new freight cars were placed in service by class 1 railroads during the first seven months of 1930, as compared with 42,552 for the same period last year. A similar increase in new locomotives also was shown in the report, 484 having been placed in service in the seven months, compared with 371 last year.

Of the new freight cars, 28,616 were box cars, an increase of 8,069 over last year and 21,463 were coal cars, compared with 14,475 last year. The railroads August 1 had 19,627 new freight cars on order, compared with 36,335 on the same date last year.

Better Living Is Farmer's Enemy.

Per capita use of cereals is on the decline in the United States. It has been shown that as incomes increase, the cheapest foods, including cereals, are less used in the family diet. Thus the increase in the standard of living in the United States has operated to the disadvantage of the farmer.

Figures and "Figures."

News that a well-known operator is "behind" a given stock is likely to give it a far greater public following than the publication of any amount of glowing statistics. News of the operator's withdrawal from the field is a much less frequent occurrence.

COMMODITY PRICES DROP TO NEW LOW

Wholesale Level Falls to 82.8, 0.12 Per Cent Below That of August 1.

ITALY HAS SENSATION

After two consecutive weeks of gains, the wholesale commodity price level fell off to a new low of 82.8 (1926 average equals 100), which was 0.12 per cent below the previous low of 82.9, reached during the week ended August 1. Thus were dashed the hopes that permanently improved conditions in the commodity markets had appeared.

A few items showed strength, such as Pennsylvania crude oil and steel scrap, which is taken as an encouraging sign of returning business activity. Items throughout the list were weak, however, with 66 per cent of the price changes showing declines. The status of the grains was little changed. The result of the downward turn in prices was to place the purchasing power of the dollar again above $1.20 for goods at wholesale, in terms of a 1926 dollar of 100 cents.

Still Rising in Italy.

Italian commodity prices provided a mild sensation. Latest available figures show their index as rising, albeit only 0.3 per cent. This is the third successive week of Italian commodity price improvement, after months of drastic decline. Last week saw another rise in the German commodity price level as well. Rather overbalancing these signs of betterment in the European picture were a somewhat intensified decline in French wholesale prices and a continuation of the drop in England. The English situation has prompted forebodings of a bitter winter of hard times there.

Agricultural Prices Weak.

The participants in last week's price movements which suffered greatest reverses were the farm products. The farm commodity index was off by more than 1 per cent, after a sizable gain during the week preceding. Evidently the expert consensus was that the drought was becoming more of hindrance than help to the situation. The agricultural index, as a result of this weakness and the coincident weakness of foodstuffs, dropped below 86, as against the 1926 average of 100. The feed shortage problem meant abnormal slaughterings and cheapened beef steers and lambs especially, tending to overcome the earlier rise in market quotations. New low prices for sugar and coffee were also important factors for the decline.

Nonagricultural products dropped as well by nearly 1 per cent, all component groups except fuel showing weakness. The strength in fuels is seasonal. Relative ease in agricultural prices, however, caused purchasing power of farm products to decline slightly.

Notwithstanding weaknesses noted in raw materials, their decline was mild compared with a drop of 1 per cent in semimanufactured goods and 1.4 per cent in finished goods. The record of recent weeks serves to show that crude products have been relatively stable, while finished goods, and, consequently, retail prices, have begun to redress their hitherto out of line position.

Stocks Will Fluctuate Around True Value

Stocks have a natural tendency to fluctuate around a level which indicates their true value. Hence it is childish to allude to bear operators as predatory persons who are purely destructive.

If pessimistic sentiment depresses a stock much below its true value, those who are aware of its value will soon right the situation by buying at that price. Short covering will necessarily follow and operate to send the price still higher.

WAR DISGUISED AS TRADE.

The campaign to exclude Russian manganese from the American market is interesting, because it represents a new angle of attack against the products of communist industry. Petitions for embargoes against Soviet lumber and pulpwood were based on allegations that convict labor enters into their manufacture. But the American Manganese Producers Association is trying to take advantage of the antidumping clause in the tariff act, which gives the Secretary of the Treasury authority to exclude commodities that are being sold on the domestic market for less than the cost of production.

It is especially difficult to prove that Russian manganese is being dumped in the United States, because the cost of its production can not be ascertained. When the state owns all the raw materials and the machinery of production and uses convict or conscript labor in turning out a product for export, there is no way of determining the cost of production within the meaning of the tariff act. The selling price of manganese in Russia can not be used, because there is no market for it in that country. But the Soviet threat to cut the price to any figure necessary to retain the American market is evidence that the cost of production is next to nothing.

Production of manganese in this country was stimulated during the war, but during the last five years the domestic industry has not produced much more than 10 per cent of the country's needs. The industry has the benefit of a tariff amounting to one-third to one-half of the market price, but the heavy importation from Russia has nevertheless forced the largest mines to close and thrown thousands of men out of work. The domestic industry is certainly entitled to protection against Russian dumping.

It is idle to pretend that the problem involved is merely economic. The communist system, which confiscates the property of the people and grinds its workmen under heel, is in competition with free industry. It is the purpose and intention of that system to ruin "capitalistic" industry and reduce civilization to the communist level. The wrecking of industry is an essential preliminary to the spread of communist doctrines, which can not flourish in a free and prosperous country.

It is possible that this issue can not be met by invoking the technical provisions of the tariff law. But the country must protect itself against competition that is designed to destroy its economic system. This competition is war disguised as trade. If nothing is done, it will be only a matter of time until other American industries are struck deadly blows by the Soviet. Unless the tariff law can be made to safeguard domestic labor and industry against communist sapping and mining, Congress must take other measures. Americans will not tolerate the destruction of their industries.

RELATIVE HAZARD OF AIR TRAVEL.

The cost of airplane travel has been gradually reduced, until now it is possible to fly between certain points for little more than the railway fare. Reduced rates will, of course, encourage air travel, but the public in general will not patronize the airplane in earnest until it becomes convinced that traveling by this method is relatively safe. The extra hazard involved in flying has discouraged travel to a greater degree than the extra cost.

J. E. Hoskins and H. R. Bassford, actuaries for the Travelers Insurance Co. and the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., recently completed for the Actuarial Society of America an exhaustive study of the safety of aircraft. They had the help of the Department of Commerce and other interested institutions, and their report constitutes the first careful study of airplane safety by competent actuaries. They found that experience on the part of pilots was the most important factor making for safety. In 1929 the death rate among pilots having less than 400 hours' experience in the air was 79 per 1,000, while the rate was only 29 per 1,000 for pilots having more than 400 hours' experience. The death rate of passengers was only 1 in 5,000 in ships operated on scheduled air lines in the period from January, 1927, through March of this year, and the fatality rate in 1929 was about 2 per 100,000 persons carried. The railways operated approximately 300,000,000 passenger-miles per death in 1929. Deaths on scheduled airlines amounted to 1 for every 1,250,000 miles flown.

These figures prove that travel by airplane is more hazardous than travel by railway, but they prove also that the airplane is not now extra hazardous. It should be remembered the figures picture the situation in the entire industry. In considering them the records of such well-managed companies as Pan-American Airways, which carried 30,000 passengers in 1929 without a fatality, and the Boeing System, whose planes flew 10,000,000 miles without fatality, should not be overlooked. The record compares most favorably with the Canadian record. Although, according to a study recently completed by the Canadian department of national defense, the Canadian airmail has operated for three years without the loss of a single life or a pound of mail, civil planes flying in the Dominion last year averaged an accident for every 216,692 aircraft-miles and one for every 4,970 flights.

GOV. ROOSEVELT FIGHTS FACTS.

Gov. Roosevelt is taking a swing around the politically strategic counties of New York, warning his constituents against that lethal Republican theory of "lifting oneself up by the bootstraps." This is just the governor's way of saying that the greedy Republican party overreached itself in trying to gain prosperity, and, as a result, fell off its perch with a crash. And now, he laments, the country has to pay for "a wild spree based on uneconomic, unscientific and unbusinesslike foundations."

Some folks thought they had discovered a new law, the governor further complains, and decided it was time to scrap the old law of supply and demand. They speeded up production, thinking to make every one as rich as the Rockefellers. But apparently production is just like a toy balloon. It can be inflated so much, and then—it goes to pieces. One gathers that Mr. Roosevelt would have every one return to producing just enough for immediate consumption, and would look with suspicion upon any one who paid high wages on the theory that he could thereby create a consumer demand.

"Pulling oneself up by the bootstraps" is particularly applied to this economic theory that high wages will create new markets for luxuries and thus extend prosperity. Two decades ago Gov. Roosevelt would have been entitled to scoff at the theory, for in those days it was nothing more than that. But today he is assailing established facts. The greatest market in the world has been created by paying American workmen high wages, and there is no reason why it should not be further developed. Labor has become very productive, and it is entitled to share the benefits of its toil. If a man can produce ten times as much as he could 50 years ago, why shouldn't he enjoy ten times as many comforts?

The fact that production has run ahead of demand indicates that demand needs stimulating. It isn't a question of scrapping the law of supply and demand, but one of applying intelligence to it. As soon as demand can be revived to its former strength, production can go on as before, or at a still more rapid rate. Any other course would utilize only part of the national capacity to produce, and unemployment would persist. Would Gov. Roosevelt have the country run at a crippled pace to avoid the production of luxuries which the people might use? A people is entitled to consume up to the limit of its ability to produce. The essential thing is to keep the income well distributed, so that production will not be stifled for want of a market.

MUSIC IN THEATERS.

Despite the assertion of Washington theater managers that, no matter what comes, the show will go on following expiration of the musicians' contract on September 1, no one need doubt that a strike looms, nor that if a strike is declared the theaters will go dark. The situation that has led to the deadlock is not peculiar to Washington. Canned music, so-called, gives the theater operator what he considers an opportunity to dispense with an orchestra. In several cities, as contracts with the musicians' union expired, the theater operators refused to renew on the old terms. The musicians, in the fight for their jobs, called on the projectionists and stage hands for support, with the result that the theaters were darkened. The result was a loss to everybody concerned.

It is bad business when the theaters of a community are closed. Considerable numbers are thrown out of work, but of more serious consequences is the fact that a community deprived of its recreation finds dangerous outlets for its restlessness. Wherever the movie houses have been closed in a general strike police records show an increase of lawlessness, generally of a petty nature, but none the less serious. Moreover, vice, petty and otherwise, increases when there is no place in which a community may spend its leisure hours in harmless recreation.

The fight over "canned music" can not be settled by a strike. In the final analysis the theater-going public will decide whether or not musicians are to be replaced with reproducing machines. If the public is satisfied with reproduced music, there will be a general substitution of reproducing machinery for musicians. If the public prefers living music, no power can force it to accept the "canned" variety. The showdown in the "canned music" dispute will not be long in materializing.

Theater owners and musicians should get together and compromise their difficulties. Even if a contract dispute should result in closing the theaters, they must ultimately be reopened through a compromise. Both sides have everything to gain and nothing to lose by compromising now instead of later. The modern way to settle industrial difficulties is through arbitration. Let the theater owners and the musicians each appoint a representative and let these representatives designate a disinterested third person, the three to constitute a board of arbitration to thrash out the question of the new contract.

INCORRIGIBLE EUROPE

From the Chicago Tribune.

Twelve years after the last guns on the western front were fired the state of Europe offers as sardonic a comment on the ingenuous hopes which inspired our first crusade to the Old World as history discloses. There has seldom been a time in European history when new wars seemed less obviously in the making. Behind the thin facade of the league, Locarno, the Kellogg-Briand treaty, the naval limitation conferences, the peoples of Europe, or at any rate their governments, are engaged in precisely the same processes that brought forth the vast disaster of 1914. Armies are training, new implements of destruction are being devised, new fortresses are building, new fighting ships are preparing. France and Italy have been on the ragged edge of open war for months. The Germans took the occasion of the evacuation of the Rhineland to stage provocative celebrations, and her popular press is full of inflammatory cartoons and articles. Her government at such a moment announces that it intends to raise the difficult and dangerous question of boundaries, though accompanying the announcement by the assertion that her effort will be diplomatic and not military. Briand's idealistic attempt to initiate a united states of Europe has dismally failed. France declares she will not accept the German plan for reuniting Prussia by removing the Polish corridor to the east, and the German effort to shorten the French regime in the Saar has come to nothing. The former states of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy are divided into two camps, each the object of diplomatic intrigue of the greater powers. The whole European cauldron is seething with the old brew. It is impossible to see any material change from the conditions which have made the almost perennial wars of the Old World since the end of the Roman peace.

We in American are not given to pessimism, but it is hard to be optimistic in the face of Europe's incurable rancors and delusions. We have in the experience of these first years following the war not only new proof of the unwisdom with which mankind is governed by its statesmen, but also and chiefly of how little wisdom there is in mankind. One would assume that at least for the generation which passed through the agony of the late war there would be no passion strong enough to withstand the passion for peace, no illusion strong enough to stand forth against the stern realities of that frightful catastrophe.

We do not think any government in Europe wants war, except perhaps the Soviet. Bolshevism alone may hope to profit by a renewal of destruction in civilized Europe. But, in spite of this, mutual distrust, jealousy, and national ambition seem to preoccupy the European mind and more attention is given to the complicated intrigues of competing nations, to the redemption of lost territories, to new experiments in alliances, and new efforts at building up power than to the development of the conditions upon which peace must be founded.

The problem of European peace can not be solved by America, as some of our dreamers have imagined. We who have a different mind and spirit can not hope to be free from the consequences toward which the Old World seems again to be moving incorrigibly. What we can do consistently with our own right of self-preservation we are doing and will do, but that we preserve ourselves as far as it is possible from the effects of a disater we can not prevent is not only our first duty, but one of the most difficult our statesmanship has ever faced. We are not isolated and can not be, if we would. But we can retain our independence of judgment and action, and this it has been the wise instinct of our people always to preserve.

MEMORY.

I had a friend who is no more,
In terms of death to speak,
He'll never walk my threshhold o'er
My comradeship to seek.
In terms of death the smile is gone
And stilled the voice I heard.
Last night his face I looked upon,
The eyelids never stirred.

And yet in terms of memory
He'll call and call again,
That smiling face of his I'll see
Untouched by grief or pain;
In terms of memory I shall hear
His footsteps at my door.
And every thought shall bring him near
And oftener than before.

A thousand things will bring him back
To walk or sit with me.
I'll stop to shift my heavy pack
And at my side he'll be.
Some one will sing his favorite song
Or praise his favorite book,
And I shall see him in the throng
With his familiar look.

To those who think in terms of death
A friend no more will come,
Eyes close with life's expiring breath,
Henceforth the voice is dumb,
But though the dead have journeyed o'er
The dark, uncharted sea,
They're nearer to us than before
In terms of memory.

Is a Man Rude If He Won't Stop Fighting Fire to Tell You Stories?

By ROBERT QUILLEN

OUR opinions are products of selfishness. We believe the thing we wish to believe and favor the cause that butters our bread.

In a recent newspaper article a writing man who travels much said many kind things about the great and good men who never are too busy to spend an hour chatting with a stranger.

Only the small fry, he concluded, are too busy to swop small-talk with a caller.

The writing man feels that way about it because he is the caller and not the man interrupted.

When I was a reporter and my job included calling on busy men and persuading them to talk, I was quite sure that those who refused to see me were afflicted with swell-head.

But when I found a new job and discovered that an hour given to callers necessitates an hour of overtime work, I began to realize that the story has two sides.

Courtesy is a matter of consideration for the other fellow, and all civilized men recognize the obligation to be courteous. But the obligation isn't one-sided. If courtesy requires the busy man to lend you an ear, it also requires you not to waste the time of a busy man.

Time is the stuff life is made of. It is a man's stock in trade—his resource—his treasure.

To take a portion of it from him without giving him equal value in return is no more just than it would be to take his purse or his watch.

"Brown wouldn't see me," you say. "He's one of these important guys who can't waste time on ordinary people." But what does Brown say of you? He says: "He's one of these important guys who thinks ordinary people should quit their work to amuse him."

If he can't spare an hour to chat with you, it doesn't follow that he dislikes people. He can't spare that hour to be with his wife and children, either, and he doesn't dislike them.

The man worth seeing is a busy man. He follows a schedule to avoid waste of time.

Should the engineer stop his train to chat with you, or should you inconvenience yourself a little and see him at the end of his run?

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

AHOY FOR THE INTERNATIONAL CUP RACE.

Sir Thomas Lipton, whose vain quests of the America's Cup have put him in the always-a-bridesmaid-but-never-a-bride class, has arrived in this country, and the next big sporting event will take place off Newport when two million-dollar sailing yachts engage in a series of tests to see which is more brittle.

• • • •

After a ten-years' interval an international cup race is again at hand off our coast. If it does nothing else it will give President Hoover an opportunity to take a census of yacht owners and prove that, despite the business recession, there are more yachts under the Hoover administration than there ever were under a Democratic regime.

• • • •

Yachtsmen regard an international cup race with the same enthusiasm as a baseball fan regards a world's series, and already a big boom is reported in our yachting cap, blue flannel coat, duck pants, binoculars, cocktail shaker and punch bowl industries.

• • • •

It was the aim of the Republican party to put a yacht in every home. The ambition might have been realized if Roger Babson hadn't gone garrulous last September. Even at that, it is surprising how many Americans are able to go in for the most expensive of sports.

• • • •

The international races may provide the big psychological punch necessary to restore prosperity. It will be impossible to look at all those costly yachts making whoopee on the sidelines and still feel that money is hard to get in this country.

• • • •

If President Hoover's industrial commission wants to restore confidence it should move to have the races transferred closer to the shore and nearer to the masses. By planning to hold the races off Newport the yachtsmen are making them almost a private event.

Ten years ago the Lipton cup hunt was held off New York, where there was also a chance the hoi polloi might get a glance at the race from a ferryboat, tug, coal barge, garbage scow, oil tanker, raft, fishing pier or rowboat.

• • • •

The races that year were a big disappointment to the yachtsmen, however, because of the fact that common people had been able to get a peep or two at the racing boats. It is pretty heartbreaking to realise that a lot of people who don't know a spinnaker from a middy blouse and whose sea life has been limited to excursion boats are getting in on an event you are attending on a twin-screw yacht costing you $2,500 every time you lift the anchor.

• • • •

In previous cup races there have been such curious time allowances and committee rules that one yacht might lead its rival over the line by half a day and be declared the loser on the ground the skippre wore the wrong hat and had snapped a garter.

• • • •

This year no huddle will be required to name the winner. A skipper whose boat finishes today will not have to lie awake all night wondering if he can lose to the boat arriving on the morrow.

• • • •

So the element of mystery will be removed and the public should get some good clean fun out of the races, even by hearsay.

THE REAL TEST.

Capt. Hawkes flew over from coast to coast the other day in twelve hours and twenty-five minutes. Such flights mean nothing to the average man, however. Not until some flier tries it with his wife will it have any significance. Anybody can make speed without the handicap of back-seat driving.

There are 234,854 idle in New York, according to estimates. But you can't look around any metropolitan office these days without feeling that this is a gross underestimate.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Business Man Discusses Unemployment and Protests Against Exaggerations That Injure Business.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The official count of the unemployed by the Census Bureau should silence loose talk about a deplorable labor situation in the United States. The volume of unemployment as of last April was not as large as expected, and much smaller than the estimates of partisan critics. Only slightly more than 2 per cent of the country's population was unemployed at the time the enumeration was made, and conditions have improved considerably since then.

The figures released by the Census Bureau include only those able-bodied persons who were out of work and were looking for a job. Inclusion of those temporarily laid off, those on vacation, the disabled and those voluntarily idle would raise the total somewhat, but the immediate problem concerns only those who have no job awaiting them and no pay checks coming in. Viewing unemployment as an emergency created by the business depression, it is proper to consider only this latter class.

Unemployment in the United States does not compare with that of Great Britain and several other European countries. Great Britain, with a little more than one-third the population of the United States, has almost as many men out of work. Reports from Germany indicate a still higher percentage of unemployment there. Compared with the rest of the world America is fortunate in being able to provide opportunities for work.

Overestimation of the seriousness of the depression is one of the reasons why the country has been slow in recovering. Secretary Davis estimated on February 13 that more than 3,000,000 men were out of work. He was criticized by Democratic alarmists for trying to minimize the extent of unemployment, but in view of the facts that have now been brought to light his figure was too high, even at that time. In recent months Democratic prognosticators have placed the number of jobless at 5,000,000 to 6,000,000. This propaganda has had an unfortunate reaction on business and industry. As a business man I protest against reckless political methods that injure legitimate business.

Americans Proud of Their Capital City—A Case in Point.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No people on earth are so proud of their Capital as are the people of this country of theirs. The large influx of tourists to Washington from various States, year after year, gives convincing proof of this. They love their Capital ardently, chiefly because it is theirs, and they are charmed with the city after having once made sightseeing tours through its beautiful parks, avenues and public buildings. It is all theirs, and proud they are of it, too!

Not all Americans who visit Washington come by train or automobile, for many high school students come here afoot, having to travel hundreds of miles to reach this city and carrying large knapsacks on their backs. One such student, after a visit to the Library of Congress, described his impressions of it as follows:

"I thought when I had entered the library and ascended the marble stairway that I was suddenly transported to another world. With bated breath I gazed on the beautiful paintings of its dome, and on the marvelous gildings. I was wonderstruck. Indeed, I had never dreamed I should find it so resplendent. I thought of it as a place where angels might dwell. As I stood in silent admiration I felt I was never so near heaven."

Having detailed this interesting impression to me, we parted. I lingered a moment, however, to watch him as he stepped gayly along, oblivious of the burden of his large knapsack and eager for other sights. On he went, and I suddenly thought of Valley Forge!

RUDOLPH PARSONS.

Trees in Washington Must Be Watered or They Will Suffer and Perish—Soak the Ground Well.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently an appeal was made to the citizens of Washington to water the trees in front of their premises. Those who water their lawns in the evening usually give the trees a sip of water, but that is not sufficient to preserve them. I think the best method is to dig the ground up around the tree for a depth of several inches and then play the hose on the surface, near the bottom of the trunk until the ground is thoroughly soaked. If the ground is not dug up most of the water will run right off, as the soil is baked hard, and the water can not penetrate to the roots.

The trees in front of dwellings will receive some attention, but what about the thousands of trees along thoroughfares where there are no homes? These trees will be neglected unless the District makes provisions to water them. What about the trees in front of Government buildings? The Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks should water the trees in front of public buildings.

Protests Supplanting of Live Music by "Canned" Tunes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let's hope the Motion Picture Theater Owners Association and the Musicians Protective Union, Local 161, will come to some agreement, that the public may not be deprived of orchestras while attending motion picture and vaudeville shows.

People accustomed to hearing orchestras at motion picture shows will not be satisfied with "canned" music. If no agreement is reached between employer and employe and "canned" tunes supplant live music the theater will lose many of its patrons.

Of the 200 men who would be out of employment many are not qualified in any other profession and would have to seek other work at lower salaries.

Ruth B. Pratt Plans Battle For Congress

Member of House, Back From Europe, to Have Broun as Rival.

By JEAN ELIOT.

REFRESHED from a trip abroad and eager for the fight which lies before her, Representative Ruth Baker Pratt is prepared to find her campaign enlivened by the fact that one of her opponents is to be Heywood Broun, famous newspaper columnist, who is a candidate on the Socialist ticket in Mrs. Pratt's New York district. "I do not know Mr. Broun personally very well," she is quoted as saying, "having met him briefly but once, but I should think his entry would make for color and interest."

In truth a picturesque element has already been injected into Mr. Broun's campaign, with a committee of actors and writers, whose names are nationally known, lined up to promote his candidacy. The chairman is Alexander Woollcott, theatrical critic, and among those who have accepted invitations to serve are Irving Berlin—he will write a Broun campaign song—Eve Legallienne, DeWolf Hopper, George Jessel, Harpo Marx, Groucho Marx, Edward J. McNamara, Walter White, James Weldon Johnson, Gilbert Gabriel and Ruth Hale. It will be remembered that Ruth Hale is Heywood Broun's wife, but, being an ardent Lucy Stone leaguer, she protests vociferously at being called Mrs. Broun.

Mr. Broun seems to be taking his candidacy quite seriously and the Broun-for-Congress nonpartisan committee has already set up headquarters in the Algonquin Hotel, long famous for its round-table luncheons frequented by the group of writers, musicians and theatrical folk, among whom are found many of Heywood Broun's cronies.

The columnist-candidate has suggested that, should the organization for which he writes object to having a contributor hold office, it might find in Mrs. Pratt a logical successor. Perhaps she will continue to hold office, but then, again—perhaps not. She faces a battle within her own party and Mr. Broun's promise, if elected, never to make a speech more than twenty minutes' long should be a talking point in his favor.

While abroad Mrs. Pratt traveled considerably. She was a guest for a time of the Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Ogden L. Mills on a yachting cruise in the Mediterranean and went with them to Albania, where they were received by King Zogu. This was the first summer in five years which she has passed outside of New York and apparently she has come back refreshed for the fray.

The Ambassador of Mexico, Senor Don Manuel Tellez, spent the week-end in Atlantic City with Senora de Telles and their children, who have been staying at the resort for a week or ten days.

Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, who have been abroad since the adjournment of the Supreme Court, landed in New York yesterday, passengers aboard the S. S. Minnewaska.

The Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Diez de Medina will return to town early this week from Atlantic City, where they are staying as guests of the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos.

The charge d'affaires of Spain, Senor Don Fernando Gonzalez Arnao, will sail Tuesday, September 2, aboard the Santa Rita for his new post as Spanish Minister to Ecuador. Senor Arnao will be succeeded in the embassy here by Senor Gomez Acebo, now attached to the legation at Budapest, Hungary. Senor Acebo is not expected to arrive in Washington until next month.

Capt. Enrique A. Prieto, military attache of the Cuban Embassy, and Senora de Prieto are at the New Ocean House in Swampscott, Mass., for a short stay.

Mrs. Merryman Joins Simpsons on Travels.

Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, of Washington, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Simpson in London, is now traveling with them on the continent. After motoring through Holland, Belgium and Czechoslovakia, they have arrived at Baden Baden, Germany, for the cure. They may go to Oberammergau for the Passion Play before Mr. Simpson returns to England. On his departure, Mrs. Simpson and Mrs. Merryman will go to Paris for a fortnight, rejoining Mr. Simpson in London late in September. Mrs. Simpson, who was Miss Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore, is Mrs. Merryman's niece.

Maj. Gen. Stephen O. Fuqua is spending the week-end with his son, Cadet Stephen O. Fuqua, jr., at West Point. Mrs. Fuqua, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Weeks, at Fort Reno, Okla., will return in September.

Miss Anne Randolph and Miss Mary Randolph are guests of Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., at Nonquitt, Mass., after spending some time at Hyannisport. From there they will go to Marblehead and they expect to visit Newport before returning to Washington for the winter.

Because of illness, Mrs. Charles S. Bromwell has been obliged to postpone her return to the United States. She is now at Ruthin Castle, North Wales, suffering from the results of an accident sustained in the gymnasium at Vichy late in May. When convalescent she will join her daughter, Mrs. Sidney Bailey, in Hampshire, going later to the south of France.

Mr. and Mrs. Atwill Vacationing in Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Atwill have gone to Michigan and will spend some time at Indian Summer Farm near Old Mission, which Mrs. Atwill recently inherited from her maternal grandfather, the late Judge Roberts, of Chicago. Before her marriage to Mr. Atwill in the early spring Mrs. Atwill was Mrs. Louise Cromwell MacArthur.

Mr. and Mrs. Atwill expect to spend part of next winter in New York. They were in Atlantic City for part of the summer, going later to Rainbow Hill, Mrs. Atwill's home in the Green Spring Valley.

Miss Louise Brooks, the daughter of Mrs. Atwill, is at Bar Harbor with her grandmother, Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, and is being much entertained. Last week Mr. and Mrs. Atwater Kent and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Kent, of Philadelphia, gave a dinner dance for Miss Brooks.

Miss Brooks will not make her debut in Baltimore and Washington next season, as had been originally intended, but will sail with friends on October 8 for Europe. She will travel extensively abroad and will spend part of the winter in Egypt.

Thomas L. Crownover Weds Miss C. W. Downey.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvin A. Downey, of Princeton, W. Va., have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Christine Weaver Downey, to Mr. Thomas Leonard Crownover, of Asheville, Tenn. The wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Downey in Princeton on August 19. Only members of the families and a few intimate friends were present because of the illness of a member of the bride's family.

The ceermony was performed by the Rev. Dr. T. C. Shuler, of Emory, W. Va., an old friend of the family, Miss Sarah Bowen, of Bluefield, W. Va., played the wedding music.

Miss Downey was gowned in a smart ensemble of black and white crepe, with a Paris hat and accessories to match her costume. She was given in marriage by her father. Her attendants were Mrs. L. Honaker White, her sister, who was matron of honor; Mrs. Margaret Bell Shaffer, Miss Elizabeth Shumate and Miss Mary Acton Black. The matron of honor's gown was of jade green chiffon, worn with a matching hat of velvet. Miss Black had chosen orchid net over satin, and the other two attendants wore frocks of rose-sprayed chiffon.

Mr. Van B. Maneval, of Asheville, was best man. The wedding party also included the bride's small nephew, Thomas Irvin White, as ring bearer. He wore a black velvet suit and carried the ring in a silver basket.

Mr. Crownover is a native of Alabama, a descendant of a prominent Southern family, and his bride's forebears were among the early settlers of Tidewater, Va., and the Shenandoah Valley. The couple will live in Asheville, Mr. Crownover being connected with the Asheville Times.

Mr. Raymond Richardson has returned to Washington after spending a short time at Newport as the guest of Maj. Randolph Coyle, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Coyle.

Other guests of Maj. and Mrs. Coyle last week were Dr. Charles B. Fowlkes and Dr. Rufus Lenzor.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Fitzgerald, with their sons, Thomas R. Fitzgerald, jr., and James Fitzgerald, are at the Madison Hotel, Atlantic City.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Elliotte Jenkins, of Warrenton, Va., who have arrived in New York from Europe, are staying at the St. Regis for a few days.

Miss Elizabeth McKelvy, daughter of Col. and Mrs. W. M. McKelvy, will be the guest in Newport, R. I., until September 15 of Lieut. and Mrs. Robert L. Densford.

Last week Mrs. Densford and Miss McKelvy motored to New York from Newport and were the guests for several days of Lieut. and Mrs. Forrest Wells.

Long Island Party Given Mrs. Tweed

"Moby Dick" Characters Step From Book in Charming Fete.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Tweed gave a costume party for Mrs. Tweed (Michael Strange) on Saturday evening, those present representing rugged characters who had stepped from the pages of "Moby Dick." Michael Strange, poet, playwright, actress and famous beauty, has taken a charming little studio house in Georgetown, where she spent part of last spring and which she expects to occupy again, but at present she is at her summer home at Montauk Point, Long Island, and it was there that the fete was given. The house, standing on a high bluff overlooking the sea, was an ideal setting for the characters out of a famous epic of the sea—in the pictured presentation of which, by the way, John Barrymore, formerly mar-

Why A&P prices for good food are low

A & P has millions of customers all over the country, and more customers are coming to A & P stores every day because they find there the good food they want at prices they know to be as low as is possible to a going business.

There is no secret about this. Like everyone else in business, A & P buys goods to sell them at a profit. A & P's unusual success is due to two facts.

(1) A & P buys the best wherever the best can be bought at greatest advantage to A & P customers; (2) A & P sells the best for only a little more than the best costs—plus selling expense. It can do both these things because so many people buy in its stores.

These people know that A & P passes on to them all the saving when prices fall at the sources of supply, retaining, under all conditions, no more than its regular profit—2½ cents in the dollar.

DIAL FLASHES

THE opening of the seventh German radio exhibition in Berlin the other day was a real event for all Europe because of one of the rare radio addresses by Prof. Albert Einstein.

"One ought to be ashamed to make use of the wonders of science embodied in a radio set, the while appreciating them as little as a cow appreciates the botanic marvels in the plants she munches," the discoverer of relativity told his hearers.

Paying high tribute to the experimenters and inventors who made radio possible, Prof. Einstein continued:

"It was the scientists who first made true democracy possible, for not only did they lighten our daily tasks, but they made the finest works of art and thought accessible to all. The radio broadcast has a unique function to fill in bringing nations together. It can be used for strengthening that feeling of mutual friendship which so easily turns into mistrust and enmity."

Because authority has been obtained from the Federal Radio Commission for the installation of a radio transmitter on the cruiser Houston, it is expected that the National Broadcasting Co. will broadcast eyewitness accounts of America's cup races off Newport, R. I., beginning Saturday, September 13. Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock is one of the entries.

GUS VAN will make his first radio appearance since the death of his partner, Joe Schenck, during the R-K-O Hour tomorrow evening (WRC, 9:30 p. m.).

Heywood Broun will resume his radio column this evening (WMAL, 10:15 p. m.).

WLW programs will be heard around the world if the Federal Radio Commission grants the Cincinnati station's request for permission to increase the power of its short wave station, W8XAL, to 10,000 watts.

TWO sporting events are scheduled for the networks on Wednesday. The Hambletonian Stake, world's premier trotting race, will be run at the Goshen, N. Y., Mile Track (WMAL, 3:15 p. m.). High lights of the first international track and field meet ever held in the United States will be given through an NBC network (WJZ, 9:30 p. m.).

Station WMAQ, and W9XAP, its new television unit, will begin broadcasting talking radio movies on a regular basis on Wednesday evening of this week. Three schedules a day will be maintained. The station expects to cover a 50-mile radius.

The engineering and production of radio is stabilized to such a point that the public can buy without fear of owning obsolete radio sets in a year or two, according to Harry Alter, president of the Radio Wholesalers' Association.

Dan Dunn Interprets the Mode

Charming frock of dull blue crepe de chine, and smart coat of woolen cloth. (Courtesy of Drecoll-Beer, Paris.)

Paris, Aug. 24.

OF course, I shouldn't care whether any one reads this column or not, much less whether they use it or not—but I do. Silly, isn't it? But you see, some people are that way. If the day ever came when I really believed that what I write here went in one ear and out the other, didn't mean anything to women who read it other than two minutes' amusement or information, I'd stop writing it, career or no.

That's why it makes me feel so badly when I meet a young enthusiast who says, "Oh, so you are Dahray! Why, I have been following your articles for years!" And I look at her and she is dressed every which way, sublimely indifferent of her effect upon the people with whom she comes into contact. And a follower of this column, too!

For, oh, dear, women have such a hard time! And how well I know that the only way a woman can compete with the times, the only way she can win and keep any sort of place for herself in life at all, is to develop herself, her womanliness, all the things women are supposed to know and do and be; all her possible beauty, her charm, daintiness, kindliness, intelligence.

Look around you, I beg. See the women who fail, fail in their career, in their home. Then compare them to the quiet voiced, smartly dressed, assured women who do not fail. These successful women have nothing that you haven't, nothing more in education than college can afford, nothing mo in talent than any one can develop, so what is the answer? That they do use their intelligence, and all of it, not just one part of the brain that learns how to pound typewriter keys, or another part of it that learns how to dress, or still another that learns how to impose upon men.

And that's what any woman has to do, today. Take inventory of yourself, I beg, and please try to read this little article with more than just a superficial air—remember, there are a lot of people working hard to put worth-while things into it!

• • • •

For instance, in selecting the smart dress and coat I have sketched for you today, a Drecoll-Beer ensemble. It would be so easy to sketch for you only decorative and flowery things, odd and unusual things, exotic and impractical things. But instead, a selection like this one carried a message of quiet smartness and chic, and tells you what truly elegant women wear in the smartest cities of the world. The dress for instance, is blue crepe with a white collar, beautifully fashioned, simple, appropriate as well for the business office as for the tea hour. The coat has the same qualities, those of quiet elegance and chic, and was of woolen material, with a tiny fur strip incrusted into the collar, and this is an excellent street coat for autumn. There's always a reason why I show you what I do in the way of garments, and the reason is always explained.

• • • •

Hey, hey, why so serious today! Oh, well, maybe I slept too much—a good way to put on weight that you don't want, by the way. Anyhow, have you sent your stamped, self addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the illustrated leaflet telling you how to make all the kind of skirts you would ever need? Wrap around ones, pleated ones, circular ones — box pleated ones, divided ones. And just to be real generous, remembering how one fan-lady complained that she never had the skirt leaflet when she had the blouse one and vice versa, I told you how to make smart blouse tops in the same leaflet. That's how helpful I am!

• • • •

Helpful also, you will find is the Weekly Dare fashion letter in each Sunday's Washington Post.

"VIRGO."

IF August 25 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a. m. to 9 a. m., and from 1 p. m. to 2:30 p. m., and from 6 p. m. to 7 p. m. The danger periods are from 6 a. m. to 7:15 a. m. and from 4:30 p. m. to 5:30 p. m.

The planetary aspects on this date are not easily interpreted. The influence will tend to relax, rather than to invigorate you, both from a mental and physical standpoint. A time-wasting period, possibly accompanied by a similar waste of money. Very minor worries.

Do not try to shape the child born on this August 25 to pattern, as it will have extreme individuality and definite talents. Allow it freedom to develop its abilities. It will have very strong likes and dislikes, and will need to learn the lessons of diplomacy.

If nature has not given you any pronounced talents, she has given you a splendid temperament. You may not be a born artist, artisan or anything else, but you have the powers within to make you an enviable "made" person in some trade or career. You are not content to sit in the valleys longingly gazing at the heights which surround you. Ambition and curiosity, if nothing else, would make you a climber. Calmness and resourcefulness are yours in time of peril. You are generally able to rise to an occasion and save it by infinite patience and perseverance. You are a dogged fighter. You do not try to suppress your desires; you try to make them glorious realities.

You have strong emotions, but your power of self-control is also strong. One would not expect you to go off at the deep end for nothing. You have simple but sound values of life and a wholesome philosophy. You may be classed among the antisentimentalists and antiromantic. You are not a hero worshipper. You bow down before ordinary men and ordinary women who behave heroically in ordinary life. You, yourself, will suffer and endure without a halo.

You are domesticated and have a deep and reverent love for your home. You understand children and are loved by them. You are a sympathetic and loyal friend. You have good recuperative powers, but should avoid drugs as much as possible, as you are physically very sensitive to their reactions.

Successful people born August 25:
1. Allan Pinkerton, detective
2. Gardiner Greene Hubbard, founder of first deaf and dumb school.
3. Francis Bret Harte, author.
4. Edgar Wilson Nye ("Bill Nye"), humorist.
5. Gen. William Weigel, U. S. Army.

ried to Michael Strange, is now gathering fresh laurels.

Ahab, hero of the tale, had double representation, both Mr. and Mrs. Tweed appearing in the role. Mrs. A. Stewart Walker, as a whale, assumed the title role. Mrs. Gardner Hale and Mrs. T. Markoe Robertson played the parts of fish nets.

Mrs. Newell W. Tilton depicted a sea-puss, Mrs. Francis C. Bishop a "poor fish," Mrs. Charles E. Mitchell, a pirate, and the Countess di Zoppola and Mrs. William B. Scaife represented sailors. The inhabitants of an 1840 fishing village were also represented.

Lanterns of various shapes and sizes lighted the veranda and the dining room with its corner bulging into a vast turret. About 50 guests were present at dinner. The entertainers were sailors and pirates, who sang sea chanties. Two of them played accordions. After dinner additional guests were invited.

Among those well known in Washington who were present at the fete were Mr. and Mrs. Norman Whitehouse, Mr. Leonard M. Thomas jr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles Oelrichs, Mr. and Mrs. William von Rath, Mr. Louis Wiley, Mr. Charles Hanson Towne, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Baker, jr., Mr. Marc Connelly, Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. 25,000 WATCH NATS OUTSLUG MACKMEN IN 7-3 VICTORY;

JENNINGS DEFEATS MITCHELL FOR PUBLIC PARKS CROWN

CAPITAL ACE BEATEN IN STRAIGHT SETS IN U. S. TOURNEY FINALS

2,500, Largest Local Net Crowd, Sees Jennings Keep Title.

Mitchell Gains Lead in First 2 Sets, But Weakens.

By JACK ESPEY.

KING GEORGE JENNINGS, Chicago's bold, blond ruler of public racqueters, felt the throne swaying a few moments yesterday afternoon when he hooked up with Dooly Mitchell, Washington's youthful challenger, in the final singles match of the national championship tournament on the Rock Creek courts.

But Mitchell didn't have the strength to finish what he tried so gamely to accomplish, and today the confident Westerner goes back home with his third successive tournament victory and possession for one more year of the handsome silver cup of the United States Lawn Tennis Association. The scores were 6—4, 7—5, 6—1.

The laughing, clowning Jennings had to play his best tennis to win. At least that much can be said in Mitchell's favor, for the Capital boy carried the fight to him in the first and second sets. But then Mitchell cracked under the strain after having twice reached set point in the second chapter, and over the remainder of the route Jennings had things his own way.

More than 2,500 persons, the largest crowd that ever has witnessed a tennis match in Washington, played stroke for stroke subconsciously in support of the curly-haired local lad. They sat there in a blazing sun, packed together on the slopes adjacent the court like sardines and cheered themselves hoarse as Mitchell took the offensive with success in the first half of the battle. Then as the tide turned and Jennings swept back in an undeniable counter-attack, they sent up groans of dismay and felt the pangs of defeat with the local favorite.

Mitchell, as did the other Jennings victims of the tourney, bowed in straight sets, but George was mighty glad that a fourth set wasn't necessary. He had had sufficient of viciously stroked forehanders and burning service that Mitchell whipped over the netting through the first set and part of the second. He was thoroughly fed up on the business of being chased, which is not to the liking of a champion.

Jennings Rallies Gallantly.

Jennings, however, showed great recuperative powers. Just at the point when it seemed he was due for an upset, he rallied gallantly to halt Mitchell's drive. He fired back with shots that had speed and accuracy to a deadly and disconcerting degree.

When Mitchell cracked, every stroke in his bag failed him, and errors streamed from his racquet as though propelled automatically. Jennings took full advantage of his rival's form reversal, scooping up points galore that he had not earned.

Although losing the first set after a 3-0 lead, Mitchell appeared the stronger during the first part of the second set. He ran up a 4-0 lead and went to 5-2, permitting Jennings to take the seventh game so that he could put his all into the eighth on his own service. He needed this game to take the set, and, moreover, to give him a psychological bracer.

Mitchell Loses Game, Netting Twice.

Then came the break. Leading, 40-15, Mitchell twice netted off his backhand, his stroking suddenly losing its rhythm, and with the game deuced, Jennings collected two more points on forcing shots to make the score read 5 to 8.

In the very next game, Mitchell again reached set point, though it was on Jennings' errors, but he unloosed three straight errors himself to create a deuce and finally lost after getting the advantage point, twice netting and hitting outside once.

Jennings' counter-offensive was then rolling along in high gear and the Chicagoan broke Mitchell's service in the tenth game at love, all four of the points resulting from Dooly's errors. Still stroking miserably, Mitchell was an easy victim in the eleventh and twelfth games, ending the set.

Mitchell Nervous At Start.

The match was delayed 35 minutes, as both players were late in arriving at the courts. Mitchell betrayed a bit of nervousness in the warm-up.

JAMESTOWN CHOICE FOR $65,000 HOPEFUL STAKES

Widener Star Undefeated To Date

Field of 15 Expected in Saratoga Closing Feature.

Horsemen See Little Chance of Upset on Saturday.

By GEORGE DALEY.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, Aug. 23—(N.Y.W.N.S.). — The Hopeful Stakes will be run next Saturday as a climax to the vacation meeting here. It is rich in money and turf values, also it is well named. Many owners and trainers are hoping to win the major share of the $65,000 purse—a sum which makes it the third richest 2-year-old fixture of the racing year, third to the futurity at Belmont Park, which carries a prize of $135,000, and to the Pimlico futurity.

None are more hopeful of winning the Hopeful than George D. Widener and his veteran trainer, Jack Joyner, who has brought Jamestown along to score in the more important stakes of the current meeting and to make good his own prediction of last June that the son of St. James—Mlle. Dazie was the best colt he has developed in years.

Fifteen Horses Likely To Start.

With H. P. Whitney's Equipoise ineligible, Jamestown is sure to be favorite for the week-end fixture with Gifford A. Cochran's Epithet the most dangerous threat. The prize is so attractive that fifteen horses are likely to face the starter, but even with the running of the Traver, and the defeat of Gallant Fox by the 100 to 1 shot Jim Dandy so fresh in mind, most horsemen are disposed to put full faith in Jamestown. Lightning, even racing lightning, seldom hits twice in the same place.

The probable starters include George D. Widener's Jamestown, the Belair stud's Ormesby, E. R. Bradley's Black Tyrone, which has shown signs of class; G. A. Cochrane's Epithet, W. R. Coe's Fydorus, winner of the Tremont Stakes; Dorwood Stable's High Day, Glen Riddle Farm's Sergeant Donaldson, Greentree Stable's Comic and Surf Board, Rancocas Stable's Ladana, Sagamore Stable's Rip Van Winkle and War, W. J. Salmon's Ladder, M. L. Schwartz's Black Forest, Wheatley Stable's Blenheim, H. P. Whitney's Rideaway and Panasette, J. E. Widener's Novelist and William Ziegler's Ilium.

Ormesby and Black Forest, which promised so much when the meeting opened, have disappointed and for the moment hardly are worth considering. In truth, none of those mentioned except Epithet can be accepted on any form so far developed to beat Jamestown, and even Epithet must be accepted on faith.

Son of Epinard, French Horse.

The last named is a son of Epinard, the great French horse out of Fairy Wand, and his first start here was so convincing of quality that many are pointing to him as one which may go on to the top of the 2-year-old heap. As said before he is the dangerous threat.

Jamestown has won five straight races and all so easily that there is no telling just how good he is. His first start was in an overnight race at Aqueduct, and since the meeting opened here he has scored in the Flash Stakes of $5,525, in which he beat Neverfade and Black Tyrone; the United States Hotel Stakes of $3,575, when he ran away from Novelist in the stretch, and the Saratoga Special of $15,050, when he defeated Equipoise, the early season champion, in a way most impressive. His victory today in the Grand Union brings his total to $42,525.

LINDBERGHS WIN AGAIN.

The Lindbergh Juniors won their nineteenth straight game yesterday, defeating the Comet Juniors, 8 to 0, with Owen in the hero role. Owen set the Comets down with five hits and fanned fifteen batters. He also contributed a triple and a single at bat. Shinn got three hits for the winners.

The Timid Soul —By H. T. Webster

Boots and Saddle's

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office.)

—Saratoga Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

The Kentucky, featuring Monday's Saratoga card, is at 5½ furlongs. BLIND LANE, on her second to Panasette, appears easily the best of the smart field. This Goodstone Stable filly has been out of the money only three times in her career, and she has run twelve races, winning four and second three times. The track may be changed any hour during weather inclined to showers, but that makes no difference with the daughter of Blind Play and Silver Lane. MORSHION, a very fast Block filly, is rated the contender. She has won three races out of six starts, but has not beaten very much. KENSINGTON should hold the others safe. This is the third event on the program.

FIRST RACE—SPANISH DANCER, with a better ride than she was given by Fator in her last start, will win the first race, for maiden fillies. She was sixth to Mabla last out, but ran the distance in the same time hung out for Mabla. THE WHIP has worked well and has run with better horses as a rule. He should be the contender. DUNROCK has a chance. SUNNY STAR is a sufficient.

SECOND RACE—SUN EDWIN makes his reappearance after a rest since June 4, having been entered in the second race, a mile, with the light impost of 115 pounds. He was trimmed by Limbus in his last start, but previously had beaten Hot Toddy. He will have SUN MISSION to defeat, which horse is conceding 5 pounds to him, and it seems the weights should be exactly reversed. SUN EDWIN will be a close price. SUN EDWIN has been out of the money only once in a year. The same is true of SUN MISSION, and both are by Sun Briar. The other horse that figures in the money is the filly CAPSTONE.

FOURTH RACE—FLYING MAX is selected to win. He is in top form. He will have ALDERSHOT to beat. DANGEROUS has a chance. He has run well his last four races, and against GONE AWAY. The distance appears too far for ADEQUATE.

FIFTH RACE—BOSKY stands out, with GENIAL HOST the contender. BOSKY beat Guilder six lengths in his last start. GENIAL HOST is in top form. DR. RANKIN should show. He can do better than his recent racing.

SIXTH RACE—YELLOW FLAG looks much the best of the 2-year-olds in the last race. This is a very fine looking filly by American Flag—Friar's Carse. She has been green in her two starts, but was beaten only a head by Black Belt last out. The distance of 5 furlongs will suit her, for she has been stopping. This is a large field, and there are some good ones that have never started. H. P. Whitney has two, one of which, PETER POLLY, is said to be very fast. She may be close up. BANAL GIRL is ready for a good race.

Pirates' Streak Ended; Divide Bill With Reds

Cincinnati, Ohio, Aug. 24 (A.P.).—The Cincinnati Reds snapped Pittsburgh's winning streak of seven straight by winning the second game of today's bargain bill, 2 to 0, after losing the first, 9 to 6. Kremer won his seventeenth victory of the season by pitching the Pirates to victory in the opener and also broke the Reds' string of five straight triumphs, compiled in that many games with the faltering Robins. Hay Kolp and Steve Swetonic engaged in a tight pitchers' battle in the night cap with Swetonic weakening in the seventh when the Reds scored twice after two were out on Swanson's double. Cuccinello's single, a walk to Heilmann and single by Crawford.

MEDICOS JOLT COLUMBIA HEIGHTS IN LEAGUE, 7-6

Eagles Down Foxall and Near Top

THE Army Medico nine, which has shown a keen delight this season in knocking down leading teams, handed the Columbia Heights team a 7-6 setback yesterday and cut the lead of the uptown club to one-half game over the Anacostia Eagles, who defeated the Foxall team, 11 to 3, in the District section of the Capital City League.

In the other league game, St. Joseph got back into winning stride, defeating its old rivals, the Woodmen, by a count of 12-7.

A crowd estimated at 1,500, which included patients, high ranking officers, soldiers and visitors, saw the Medicos nose out the league leaders. While the game was loosely played at some stages, many brilliant plays were witnessed. Bagley, of the Medicos, turned in two fine running catches.

In the third inning, with the score tied, Isom cleaned the bases with a triple and scored on an error to give the Army Team five runs, but Columbia Heights came back to score three in their half on three hits, two errors and two stolen bases. The Medicos were in front for the remainder of the game, each club scoring twice in the seventh inning.

Jake Lewis produced the Columbia Heights pair with a homer after Singman had singled.

In the ninth, with Columbia Heights needing a run to tie, Shapiro hit a ball labeled "home run." However, Bagley made a spectacular catch after a long run to end the game. A. Lewis went the route for the Soldiers. Goodman, after relieving Newman in the seventh, did not allow a soldier to reach first base.

The Anacostia Eagles trailed for five innings of their game with Foxall, being held scoreless by Mattare, who beat St. Joe. However, in the sixth the Eagles batted around in scoring seven runs and knocking the Foxall star out of the box. The Eagles also batted around in the eighth frame which brought four tallies.

Goodwyn in Fine Form.

Jimmy Goodwyn turned in another brilliant game for the Eagles. He fanned five batters and was in trouble in only two innings.

The all-around play of Sugrue, Eagles' outfielder, was one of the features of the game.

Tom Sweeney continued his sensational hitting, getting three out of five. Gartland hit a homer for Foxall.

St. Joseph returned to its slugging ways yesterday, pounding out eighteen hits against the Woodmen. Bosie Berger, who has been hitting at a terrific pace, came through with two doubles and a pair of singles in four trips to the plate. Huck Hilleary got three out of four and stole four bases.

Every player in the line-up got at least one bingle.

Schneider went the route for St. Joe but had trouble getting by in the ninth when the Woodmen scored three runs and threatened to tie the score.

Doc Baker hit a homer for the Woodmen.

Annapolis Tossers Easy for French A. C.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 24.—The French Athletic Club, of Washington, defeated the local Annapolis Baseball Club here this afternoon, 12 to 5. Although the Annapolitans took an early lead and held a 2-1 advantage up to the fifth, the visitors rallied in that frame to score three runs and in the seventh blasted the local defense for seven more. The rally was mainly caused by bad play on the part of Annapolis, only four hits, a triple by Latin, Chaconas' double and singles by Mattingly and Doffermyer being registered.

Chaconas, the visiting twirler, pitched a steady game, losing control only in the eighth when Annapolis pushed three counters across. "Newby" Catlin, star local southpaw, was off form and the visitors laced him hard, gathering thirteen safe blows, six of which were for extra bases, including a homer by Taylor, first sacker.

The following teams are requested to have representatives present: Mount Rainier, Hyattsville, Bethesda, Boulevard, College Park, Takoma Park, Kensington, Silver Spring, Rossl'n and Clarendon. The national champion Bethesda Team and the runners-up Clarendons already have decided to take franchises in the new league.

HUCK STAHL and Blackie Adair proved the winning combination of the Dixie Pig Team yesterday when it defeated the Mount Rainier Club, 5-3, to cut the lead of the latter team in the race for the Prince Georges County championship. Mount Rainier has another game with Hyattsville and can clinch the pennant with a victory.

Adair supplied the pitching and Stahl the batting in the battle staged at the Byrd Stadium.

Stahl cracked out two home runs and a double, scoring three runs. His homers were two of the longest seen on the Byrd Stadium diamond.

Homers Produce Five Runs.

In fact, homers accounted for five of the eight runs scored, Mosedale and Lyons came through with circuit clouts for Mount Rainier.

Adair, who lost a game to Mount Rainier, was in rare form yesterday and deserved his victory over Bob Lyon, one of the leading sandlot hurlers in this section. Adair fanned five batters and walked only one.

Fee Colliere nipped a Mount Rainier rally when he threw a man out at third on an attempted double steal.

The Pigs took the lead in the first inning. Watts walked and went to second on an infield out. Clapper scored him with a single to center but was out at second on the throw-in. Stahl followed with his first homer, a drive to rightfield.

Mount Rainier Ties Score.

Mount Rainier tied the score in the sixth when Mosedale hit a home run with W. Smith on base, but the Pigs came back in their half of the inning to match those tallies.

Stahl doubled to left. Joseph bunted down the third-base line and Lyon threw the ball over the first baseman's head, Stahl scoring and Joseph going to third. Joseph scored on Radtke's sacrifice fly.

The only other score of the game came in the eighth when Stahl slammed a homer to deep center field.

Next Sunday's Hyattsville-Mount Rainier game will be played at Byrd Stadium.

BETTY NUTHALL WINS U. S. WOMEN'S TITLE

the set at 2-all, and Miss Nuthall lost the next two games by a series of errors. For a few minutes it looked as though the English girl had blown up, for she couldn't keep her speed under control and the linesmen, sitting like bailiffs at the door of a jury-room, barked the bailiff's cry, "out" Then she steadied and Mrs. Harper lost her lead and the match and the title, batting the ball into the net or widly outside in a futile stand against a stronger game.

When the last placement escaped Mrs. Harper's despairing back-hand sweep along the ground, the pair of them ran to the net in a demonstration of sporting manners more friendly than some such little scenes enacted on the same spot in other seasons, and the girls stood patiently before the firing squad of photographers for full ten minutes.

Walter Merrill Hall, the president of the West Side Tennis Club, placed the big permanent cup in Miss Nuthall's arms and she, breathless from her exertions and the excitement of winning, gasped a few phrases into the portable microphone of the talking newsreels. Then Hall jammed a bunch of American beauties into Mrs. Harper's trophy, a smaller cup, and after one more stand before the photographers the two walked off together.

Betty Nuthall may not be the best player in the world, but she will do very well as champion until the champion comes back.

Incidentally, and not that gate receipts ever matter in the tennis business, the show drew $14,000 this year.

Miss Nuthall and Miss Sarah Palfrey, young American girl, captured the doubles championship by scores of 3—6, 6—3, 7—5 from Mrs. Harper and Miss Edith Cross.

WONDER BOY NINE WINS TITLE, 10-8

Georgetown Loses in 12th, 10-8, for Insect Title.

THE Wonder Boys, coached by Bill Poole, won the Capital City League Insect championship of The Washington Post's gold baseballs yesterday by defeating the Georgetown Nine in the deciding game of their three-game series by a 10-to-8 score. It was only befitting that a titular battle between these game little teams should go into extra innings. It did. The game was decided in the eleventh, when the Wonder Boys shoved over a pair of tallies.

The Wonder Boy and Georgetown nines will go down in Capital City League history as two of the most evenly matched section winners of all times. In five meetings this season, three contests have gone into overtime. One game ended in a tie. The Wonder Boys won three by close scores and the Georgetown Team took the other.

In defeat the Georgetown Boys, under the coaching of Buck Trundle, can feel proud of their record.

Georgetown First To Score.

Georgetown was first to score, producing a tally in the first inning. The Wonders took a 3-1 lead in the fourth and added two runs in the fifth and another pair in the sixth. Georgetown scored twice in the fifth and three times in the sixth.

When the Wonder Boys added a run in the ninth to gain an 8-6 advantage it appeared that the game was over. However, the Georgetown boys were not through. They promptly staged a two-run rally which sent the game into overtime.

Bell's relief pitching and the batting of Cuozzo, McConnell, Parkhill and Bresnahan were the features for the Wonder Boys.

Givonnetto and Dunnigan led the Georgetown attack. Cuzzo and Harris hit homers.

O'Briens Defeat Olmsteds, Even Senior Class Play-Off

Grillmen Bow, 8-7, as Carter and Lawson Star; Deciding Game Booked for Next Sunday.

THE C. A. O'RIEN Club and young Frank Carter showed ability to come back yesterday. The O'Briens, facing the task of winning or letting the Olmsted Grill Nine take the Capital City League senior class championship, came through with an 8-to-7 victory to even the series on the North Ellipse diamond before one of the largest crowds of the season.

Carter, the winning pitcher, did an about face in the contest. After walking five men and granting a hit which netted Olmsted five runs in the first inning, he allowed only two hits for the remainder of the game. Carter fanned eight batters and stole the show from Everett Russell, hero of the first game.

Lawson, former Eastern High star, was the big gun at the bat for O'Briens. He hit a homer in the first inning with two men on, and his single led to the winning run in the eighth.

Lawson Scores Winning Run in Eighth.

Lawson's drive went through the rightfielder's legs and the runner pulled up at third. Franke scored him with a sacrifice fly.

Carter pulled out of a threatening position in the ninth inning when the Olmsteads got two men on base with two out. He fann'd Miller to end the game.

Farrell also hit a homer for the O'Briens. The fielding featur- of the game was provided by Bussink, who made a thrilling running catch in the first inning to cut off several runs.

The O'Briens lost the services of Raffo, their star catcher, in the sixth inning, a foul tip split his finger

The third and deciding game of the serie will be played on the North Ellipse next Sunday at 3 o'clock near-Texas Leaguer opening the second.

IN THE WAKE OF THE GAME

Cronin made an excusable error in the Mackian second, but made up for it when he led off in the home half, swinging to left on the first ball pitched for the Nats' first safety of the game.

Simmons used his head after taking Bluge's sacrifice fly. He made no effort to stop Cronin from scoring after the catch, for the fly was quite deep, but threw quickly to second to hold Judge on the initial sack.

Bishop almost knocked Judge down with a grounder in the third, but the Nat captain quickly recovered the ball and just managed to slide into the bag before the runner reached it.

Bluege cut over all the way from third to behind the mound to take Summa's dinky pop fly in round 3.

The Nats went down in order on three short flies, two of them within the infield, in their third session.

Simmons was credited with the first Philadelphia single, lining safely to center with one dead in the fourth.

A fast double play, with Cronin taking Dyke's bounder near second, tagging second and pegging to first ahead of the hitter, ended the Macks' fourth-frame rally which tied the string at 1-all.

Cronin was held to a double when his hard-hit grasser down the left-field foul line bounded into the stands.

Myer camped under Summa's pop to end the alien fifth for his first chance of the game.

Cochrane and Dykes narrowly escaped a collision in the home sixth, when both went chasing after Rice's pop fly. The catcher reached over the third baseman's head to grab the ball, much to the latter's surprise.

Sammy West may be weak against southpaw pitching but he certainly pickled one of Walberg's slants yesterday, his triple in the sixth which scored two runs, hitting the scoreboard. Had it not caromed directly into Miller's hands, it would have been a homer.

Walberg helped along his own cause by hitting safely three times. He doubled in the fifth, beat out a topper roller to Crowder in the seventh, and singled opening the ninth.

Bishop misjudged Manush's speed in the seventh and pegged lazily to first, the runner being given credit for a hit by beating the toss to the sack.

MUNY TITLE IS HELD BY JENNINGS

Mitchell Beaten in Straight Sets in Final Round.

with Jennings smiling confidently and keeping on his sweater, a gesture that probably indicated anticipation of soft opposition.

Mitchell won the first three games and King George doffed the sweater. When Dooly took a 4-2 lead, acing and passing him for the last two points after deuce, Jennings even changed racquets. The switch appeared to bring him luck, for he took the next four games to capture the set.

With huge odds staring him in the face, Mitchell was no match for the Westerner in the third set. He was tired and probably discouraged, although he found a measure of restorative power in the pleadings of the crowd.

Jennings beat him at the lobbing game in the opening number and went to 2—0 as Dooly twice double-faulted in the second game. Jennings served a love game in the third to bring victory closer and quicker. Momentarily, Mitchell stopped in retreat to win the fourth on his delivery and carry the next two to deuce before bowing, but the errors were still in his system and the champion yielded only one point in the decisive game.

Jennings now has won three singles titles and four doubles championships in four years of national public parks competition. On Saturday, paired with Jack De Lara, he won the doubles. Last year he won the doubles paired with Bob Considine, District of Columbia champion, and in the previous two years was triumphant in a partnership with Ralph Rice, fellow Chicagoan. He defeated De Lara for the 1929 singles title and conquered Lester Stofen, Los Angeles, in 1928.

Silva Takes Feature In Filipino Tourney

The second round of the Filipino Club tennis tournament was completed with the exception of one match yesterday, and M. Zamora, defending champion, came through among the winners with an easy victory over I. Domingo, who was expected to furnish close contention, but fell before the champion's accurate chopping and placements.

J. Silva and F. Piniera staged the feature match, the last mentioned taking the decision after three-hard fought sets, 6—2, 2—6, 8—6. Silva was leading in the third set when he faltered in the sixth game.

The tournament will be continued today at 6 p. m. Yesterday's results follow:

M. Zamora defeated I. Domingo, 6—1, 6—3; P. Rulloda defeated E. Butuyan, 6—3, 6—2; Fonbuena defaulted to Piniera; Baradi defeated V. Mangwang, 7—5, 6—0; Vallesteros defeated E. Madarang, 7—5, 4—6, 7—5; C. Carballo defeated Frigillana, 6—0, 6—2.

THIRD ROUND—C. Carballo defeated Baradi, 6—2, 6—3; Piniera defeated J. Silva, 6—2, 2—6, 8—6.

son. He played center yesterday in ever, before he will be ready to draw an assignment.

Not only is Marberry anxious to get his arm functioning properly, but he place of Mule Hans, who is nursing a minor injury.

First Baseman Joe Kuhel reports himself ready for service again, but he probably will not be called on for some time as Manager Walter Johnson plans to keep Joe Judge on the job for some time.

Manush contributed the best catch of the game in the ninth when, with Walberg on second, he came in almost behind second to take Summa's looper. It looked like a sure hit as it left the bat.

TAYLOR STEALS HOME, CUBS DEFEAT GIANTS

in the eighth, got his orders and walked Hartnett and Lester Bell, filling the bases after Kelly had struck out, to get at Guy Bush, cub hurler who had fanned twice. Heving got two strikes on Bush, then deliberately wound up and threw a wide one. Taylor started with the pitch and hit the plate so quickly that no effort was made to get him.

The stage obviously was all set for the play, for Bush leaped back out of the way, took one look and raced for the Cub bench.

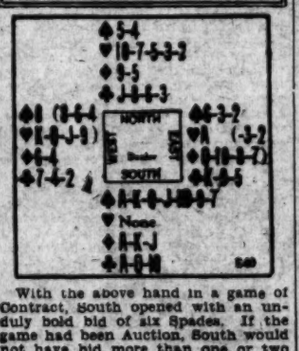
Work's Bridge



With the above hand in a game of Contract, South opened with an unduly bold bid of six Spades. If the game had been Auction, South would not have bid more than one or two initially; and West, if he bid Hearts would not have carried the bid very far on account of the weakness of his side suits.

In the play West led the King of Hearts which South trumped. Then Declarer, in his anxiety to ruff South's losing Jack of Diamonds, led his Ace, King and Jack of Diamonds without first leading a round of trumps. He was dismayed when West froze North out by ruffing the Jack with the trump Eight; he had not thought of a possible 6-2 division of the eight adverse Diamonds, although the abnormal distribution of South's hand might have sounded a warning.

After winning trick 4, West led a second Heart which South again ruffed; but being unable to get in the dummy hand to lead Clubs through East, Declarer had to lose to the King of Clubs and consequently failed to make his contract.

It is conceded that the one play which could have brought Declarer success seemed unlikely to affect the result because it was most improbable that either adverse hand had only two Diamonds and the singleton Eight of trumps; but danger of this faint possibility could have been removed without spoiling North's ruff by leading one round of trumps before leading a Diamond. If Declarer had thought of that, he would have made thirteen tricks because he could have followed by leading the Jack of Clubs from North, which would have ensured the capture of the King.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

TEACH YOUR CHILD TO SHARE ITS PLAYTHINGS.

(Children's Bureau, Department of Labor.)

The child should be taught to share his toys and playthings, his candy, books and pennies with other children. In games he must learn to strive for the good of the group and not for personal achievement. If defeated, he must learn to acknowledge better playing and take it with a smile. Children should learn to play many games with fair ability rather than to excel in one particular game. There is a great tendency, not only on the part of children but on the part of adults as well, to cling to the things they do exceptionally well and retire from the field of activity where they do not excel. Unselfish conduct should always be rewarded by commendations and occasionally by something of a material nature. There is certainly no disadvantage in the child's learning from experience that unselfishness is a paying experience.

MAN HURT IN AUTO CRASH HELD WHEN CAR YIELDS FLASK

Arrest of Reported Driver, Near Death, Follows Finding of Bottle.

QUIZ OF FATAL ACCIDENT HINGES ON HIS RECOVERY

Rock Creek Smash-Up, in Which One Died, Clouded in Mystery.

The arrest of James Vernon Clatterbuck, 38 years old, 44 Franklin street northeast, was ordered yesterday after police found an empty bottle which they said had contained liquor in the wreckage of the car which crashed into a bridge truss early yesterday, killing one and injuring six others, four seriously. Clatterbuck was said to have been the driver of the car which hit the beam at Twenty-eighth and K streets.

The arrested man was one of the seriously injured, and he is at Emergency oHspital. A police guard has been put over him. On the books of the Third Precinct, where the accident happened, he is charged with investigation.

The dead man was Raymond C. Wenttang, 57 years old, of 80 Seaton place northwest, a former employe of the Postoffice Department.

In addition to Clatterbuck those seriously injured are Raymond Wenttang, 26 years old; Margaret Wenttang, 22 years old, and Edwin Wenttang, 24 years old, all of the Seaton place address. Raymond Wenttang is still semiconscious at Emergency Hospital, where all the injured were taken.

Car Is Wrecked.

Two other occupants of the car, Catherine Totten, 32 years old, of 80 Seaton place, and Joseph E. Owens, 28 years old, of 1321 Belmont street, were less seriously hurt. Owens left the hospital after treatment for lacerations. The girl is still in the institution with a fractured right ankle and a possible fractured skull.

The seven persons were riding in a light car which struck a high steel girder which supports the bridge and divides the roadway into two lanes. The car was almost completely wrecked and the occupants were thrown into the roadway.

Cause Is Mystery.

Because of the remoteness of the bridge from dwellings, it was several minutes before an alarm was flashed to hospitals. First comers said that Clatterbuck, who was driving, was wedged into his seat with his chest apparently crushed by the steering wheel. Other unconscious and bleeding bodies were lying in the street.

Four patrol wagons, two ambulances, two rescue squads and police reserves were rushed to the scene. Later headquarters detectives and a representative of the homicide squad were called out.

No one seemed able to offer any explanation of how the accident occurred, as the driver has been unconscious since the crash. Coroner Ramsay J. Nevitt said yesterday that an inquest into the death of the elder Wenttang will be held as soon as the other riders in the car are well enough to testify, unless the driver, Clatterbuck dies. In this case there will be no inquest.

He was said to have been in the office of Representative Lindsay only a short time when he walked into a corridor and fell unconscious. His outcry attracted a guard in the building, who summoned police and a hospital ambulance. Miniature Golf Links Operator Is Arrested Regulations Requiring Courses in City to Be Closed at 11:30 p. m. Basis of Drive Instituted by Police.

As the first move in a drive to force miniature golf courses to conform with police regulations, John Sorrell, operator of the "Madame Queen" course at Connecticut avenue and Macomb street northwest, was arrested early yesterday morning. He was charged with keeping an amusement open after hours.

Sorrell, who is 17 years old, gave his address to police of the Fourteenth Precinct, who made the arrest, as Twin Oaks, Woodley road northwest. He was released after he posted $25 collateral.

Miniature golf courses come under the section of the police regulations covering circuses, carnivals and tent shows and other amusements taking place on open lots. Regulations require that the operator of the amusement have the consent of a majority of the property owners within a certain radius, and also that it be closed at 11:30 at night during the week.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Stanley DeNeale recently issued an order that the closing hours specified by police must be obeyed, and the greater number of the courses complied with the order. The "Madame Queen" course, however, is alleged to have been operated after the specified hour.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY COMES TO DEFENSE OF NEW LAW CODE

House Committee Executed Fine Piece of Work, Rover Declares.

BAR SECRETARY ADDS PRAISE FOR STATUTES

Everything Is Collected Into One Concise Volume, He Asserts.

District Attorney Leo A. Rover defends the new District of Columbia code against the attack of lawyers who assert that instead of codifying the existing laws the House committee on revision of laws has revised them.

Mr. Rover believes that the committee has done a fine piece of work. The previous code, he said, was composed almost exclusively of laws covering Federal offenses.

What the committee did, according to Mr. Rover, was to bring all the District and Federal laws into one code therefore facilitating prosecution of violators. Heretofore, these laws had been spread through numerous volumes, he pointed out.

Gives Office Aid.

Some offenses not included under the old statutes are included in the new work, Mr. Rover said, and added that the efforts of the committee gave his office an invaluable aid. Mr. Rover disagrees with the argument of those opposed to the new laws in their contention that a revision has been made of the old code.

Mr. Rover also believes that the same aid that is given to his office by the new code will also apply to the office of Corporation Counsel William W. Bride.

Gertman Praises Code.

Further praise for the consolidators was given by George C. Gertman, secretary of the District Bar Association, who said "I think it is an excellent thing. Everything is collected into one concise volume, and lawyers have to ferret through the statute books in search of the information they desire.

"It is very helpful to lawyers, and I think Representative Roy C. Fitzgerald and his committeemen are entitled to credit and not condemnation for their work."

Support of the code was occasioned by a letter to Representative Fitzgerald by Harry S. Barger, widely known attorney, who characterized the code as "absolutely worthless" and declared that the committee had revised the code instead of consolidating and codifying the laws.

Bullet in Sheriff Foils Rum Arrest

County Deputy in Serious Condition After Autoist Shoots and Flees.

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 24.—Shot down by the man he was attempting to arrest on a prohibition charge last night, J. Burke Leftwich, Pittsylvania County deputy sheriff, is in critical condition in a Danville hospital. The bullet penetrated his lung.

The shooting occurred at Pittsville, a small town 7 miles west of Gretna and 40 miles south of Lynchburg. Leftwich and P. B. Coffey, also a county officer, were driving out State highway No. 20, the Gretna-Rocky Mount road, when a man whose car had been parked beside the road halted them. He asked the way to Leesville. While Coffey was talking to the man, Leftwich walked over to the parked car, in which a woman was sitting. After looking into the car a moment, he was said to have turned and told the man he was under arrest. "There's liquor in that car," Coffy quoted Leftwich as saying.

Neither officer was in uniform, and Leftwich was wearing his badge under his coat, it was said. When he started toward the man to put him under arrest, the man pulled a gun and shot him down, then jumped on the running board of the car. The woman took the wheel and they escaped.

Missing Physician Found Badly Hurt

Dr. Dabney, of Charlottesville, Discovered in Bush With Wrist Cut.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 24.—Missing since an early hour yesterday morning, Dr. Cecil Dabney, one of the city's best known physicians, was found shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon crumpled up in a clump of bushes not far from Rio, 4 miles north of this city. One of his wrists was badly cut and he had lost a large quantity of blood. He was brought at once to the Martha Jefferson Hospital, where he is a member of the staff. His condition is regarded as critical.

Failing to appear at his office during the night, searching parties were formed this morning. Sheriff J. Mason Smith and Boy Scouts aided in the quest. Before noon the doctor's car was found parked in the middle of the road near Rio, but it was three hours before he was discovered, fully a mile from where the car was found.

Dr. Dabney was reared at the University of Virginia and graduated in medicine from that institution. For a number of years he practiced his profession in Baltimore, returning to Charlottesville about three years ago.

Immortality Is Topic Of Rev. Ray Palmer

Bethany Guest Preacher Says Greatest Men Have Believed.

THE REV. RAY PALMER.

The Rev. Ray Palmer preached Sunday morning at the Bethany Baptist Church, of which Dr. Hugh T. Stevenson is pastor. Dr. Palmer's theme was "Is the Grave a Blind Alley?" Text: Job, xiv:14: "If a man die, shall he live again?" The speaker said in part:

"This question, propounded by the servant of God in the long ago, has been coming down the ages, demanding an answer. If this question is answered in the negative, then all life is shorn of its meaning and no life is worth the living; but let this question be answered in the affirmative and every life is worth the living, if it is well lived.

"No, the grave is not a blind alley. We shall live again, first, because of God's power. Since God is omnipotent, he has surely created something commensurate with his limitless power.

"We know that all material things are evanescent; they are passing away. Is it possible that man himself is also like a bubble of the sea? No, it can not be.

"God's justice also demands a life after death. This world is filled with injustices. Here Nero lights his garden with the burning bodies of the saints; here Tiberius casts the people of God from the lofty heights, to be torn to pieces on the rocks below.

Right Forever on Scaffold.

"Here, 'Right forever on the scaffold, wrong forever on the throne; behind that scaffold standeth God within the shadow, keeping watch above His own.'

"And He who keeps watch above His own will see to it that there shall be a life beyond the vale of tears, where the righteous shall be rewarded and the wicked shall be punished.

"Again the grave is not a blind alley, because of man's universal belief in immortality. No tribe, however low, has been found that did not believe in a supreme being and in a future life.

"The ancient Egyptians in the mummifying of the bodies of the departed, expressed their belief that the soul would need the body in the life to come.

"The Greeks put money in the mouths of the dead, that they might pay their way over the river Styx.

"The American Indians, buried with their deceased the tomahawk and the bow and arrow, to be used on the happy hunting grounds.

Mighty Intellects Believe.

"As we rise in the scale of being, we find that the men of the mightiest intellects believe profoundly in the immortal existence. Before drinking the hemlock, Socrates speaks, somewhat conciliatorily, of annihilation, but he turns from that thought and finds consolation in the belief that he would receive justice before the throne of God—something denied him in this life.

"Such men as Plato, Aristotle, Milton, Shakespeare, Emerson, Hugo, Mills, Gladstone, Washington and Lincoln and thousands of others, the mightiest thinkers and great characters of all time, have believed that death is not a blind alley, but the golden gate to immortality.

"It must be so, Plato; thou reasonest well, else whence this hope, this fond desire, this longing after immortality; or else whence this secret dread, this inward horror of falling into naught?

"'Tis the divinity that stirs within us; 'tis heaven itself that points out an hereafter and intimates eternity to man.

"Again, the grave does not end all because man does not reach the fullness of his possibilities in this world. Humbalt said at 90: 'Oh, that I could live a hundred years longer, that I might accomplish some of my dreams.'

Quotes Victor Hugo.

"Victor Hugo said: 'I feel within me the life to come; I am like a forest oftimes cut down, the younger sprouts are livelier than before. I am rising, I know, towards the sky, the earth yields to me her generous sap while heaven lights me with the lights of innumerable worlds.

"'You tell me that my soul is but the resultant of physical powers; then why is my soul the more luminous when my physical powers begin to fail?

"'I feel that my work is scarcely above its foundation; I would gladly see it mounting and mounting forever. The thirst for the infinite proves infinity.'

"Again, if a man die, he shall live again because Jesus Christ, the Son of God, has brought life and immortality to light through the gospel.

"He, alone, has declared, with absolute authority and assurance. 'In My Father's house are many mansions. I am the resurrection and the life.'

"Jesus Christ said: 'Lay up your treasures in heaven,' and again, 'Because I live, ye shall live also.'

"The Son of God proved existence beyond the grave by His own glorious resurrection from the dead. No fact of all history is more firmly fixed than that Jesus Christ arose from the dead.

"Paul eloquently exclaims: 'But now is Christ arisen from the dead and has become the first fruits of them that slept.

"'There is no death, the stars go down to rise upon a fairer shore; and bright in heaven's jeweled crown they'll shine forever more.

"'Ever near us, tho' unseen,
"'The dear departed spirits tread,
"'For all the boundless universe is life;
"'There are no dead.'"

TWO SHOW HOUSES FORMULATE PLANS IN MUSIC IMPASSE

Palace to Eliminate Stage Presentation in Case Agreement Fails.

FOX WILL HAVE USUAL BILL FOR THREE DAYS

Joe Winkler, Labor Relations Man Arrives to Confer on Settlement.

While oth sides in the theater owners-musicians disagreement apparently rested yesterday preparing for a strenuous week of efforts to reach a solution to their problems, there were one or two developments along the local rialto.

Joe E. Winkler, labor relations representative of the Fox Theaters Corporation, arrived in the Capital ready to confer with owners and musicians regarding a possible settlement of their contract differences.

Then, too, the two motion picture houses which have featured stage shows in addition to the films, announced their policies, providing no agreement with the musicians has been reached by the time next week's new shows are billed to begin.

Two Different Plans.

The present contract between the owners and the Musicians' Union does not expire until midnight next Sunday, so that for the Fox Theater three days of music will be available while for the Palace, starting its show on Saturday, two days of music might be had.

However, the two houses have announced different systems of meeting the situation. If no agreement has been reached, the Fox will offer its usual bill, including stage show overture and other musical features including a guest organist. On the other hand the Palace will make no attempt to put on a stage show. While the Loew nit scheduled to play the F street house will come to Washington, it will not go on during the week unless a sudden agreement is reached.

Michael Cullen, general manager of the Loew interests in the Capital, said last night that attempting to put the stage show on for just two days would create too many complications and the unit would be held ready for a quick appearance in case the contract with the musicians is signed without much advance notice.

Directed Largest Strike.

Mr. Winkler, the Fox labor relations representative, is a man well versed in such situations as the one existing here at present for he served as president of the Chicago local of musicians for 14 years and has also been a member of the national executive board of the musicias organization. In 1919 he directed the biggest strike of musicians in history at Chicago.

"I will be highly gratified if I can be as successful in averting one in Washington now as I was in 1919 in directing this one," said Mr. Winkler, discussing the Chicago walkout.

Mr. Winkler's object in coming to Washington is to arrange another meeting between the owners and the musicians, both sides having previously announced they would make no move until the other had acted first. The musicians have sent the owners a letter outlining their stand and the owners have declared they will talk contract with the musicians only when the clause in the contract stipulating the number of men to be used is eliminated.

A. J. Brylawski, president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners Association, was out of the city yesterday and A. C. Hayden, president of the musicians' local, could not be reached.

Police Driver Nabs Rum Car But Thieves Steal It Away

While headquarters detectives he drives were busy in a house in Temperance court northwest early yesterday morning, A. D. Mullins, driver of the police car, did a little law enforcing on the side. Seven cases of liquor and a car were seized as a result of his activity.

The machine a short time later was stolen from the curb in front of the Second Precinct Station.

Mullins was waiting in the court, which is near Twelfth and T streets northwest, when he saw two cars turn into the alley. Their drivers apparently recognized the police car and speeded up in an attempt to get away. Mullins started his engine and took off in pursuit, but found the fleeing men had abandoned one car just around the corner. They escaped, with the loss of one auto and its cargo of seven cases. The man sought by the detectives in the house was found, but proved not to be the man wanted.
